BY DYKE CLARK.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Sept. 15.—Prepared to get up nearer to zenith by slamming the Doves a few times the Chicago Clubs sailed into the bed diamond headquarters with savage mien exhibited on every move they made, but the Doves were determined to die hard and make the world's champions sweat for every point they captured.

Manager Chance said rehearse as matter with his warriors in practical way, and all they needed more real oil the Giants and assure for them this year was a series of breaks to their favor, and there would be nothing to it.

Cubs Well Trained.

Like most teams in the thick of a pennant gruelling the Cubs looked a bit tired to the minute, but they took things easier than a new team would in search dope of winning the pennant. They knew that in spite of just easy wins from the Doves that if was the one team which would be able to knock them over to the second division crowd and therefore were going to get the series over as quickly as possible and be on their way.

The veterans on the Doves rather revelled in such warfare as the Cubs were apt to show, as some of them had been on championship teams themselves and knew the feeling and the best way to kill it when the other fellows were afflicted as the Cubs were.

It was a formidable lineup the Cubs presented in their last fight along the line, without any missing in the ranks to break up the system, and the local fans saw little chance of stopping them unless the omen tributes of the game that some Hi-luck in the way of the Cubs.

Chance Wanted the First.

Manager Chance was determined to take the first game, and thereby get a good start, and figured the rest would be simple once putting the lid on.

He had Southpaw Pfeister shine up for the fray, and also his pet article, Mordecai Brown, who can pitch wonderful ball with only three fingers on his working hand, while it takes more than the five some of the other sixhuns have. For the Doves Lindeman, who did not go to Philadelphia, but rested at home to be in readiness for the fray, was in excellent shape for some hard work, and was down on the slate to gauge the plate.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Sept. 15.—The Red Sox practically wound up their season on the local grounds this afternoon, the New York Highlanders being the opponents. To be sure, there are three or four more games scheduled for Boston the first week in October, but the weather is likely to be cold and the attendance light.

To-night the Red Sox leave for the West on their last trip of the year, opening at Cleveland on Thursday for three days. Then they go to Detroit for three days, then to St. Louis for three more and then to Chicago, winding up in the Windy City on September 29. Returning by way of Philadelphia, the Red Sox play there on October 1, 2 and 3, and then come back to Boston for the last games of the season with the Yanks and the Athletics.

The air to-day was a trifle chilly, and this, combined with the fact that there was opposition on the National League Grounds, where the Chicago Cubs tackled the Doves, kept the attendance down to somewhat small figures.

It was Fred Burchell's turn to pitch for the Red Sox, and he was anxious to wind up here with a victory. The Benson, Kid Elberfeld, manager of the Yanks, thought seriously of sending Hogg back to get another victory from the Red Sox. The series stood two apiece when the fun began and both teams fought hard for the rubber.

SCOUR WOODS TO FIND LOST SOCIETY GIRL

Wealthy Father Heads Search to Solve Strange Disappearance of Young Woman.

CHESTERFIELD, Sept. 15.—John Hilbert, a wealthy business man of Philadelphia, arrived here to-day to head the search for his daughter, Esther H. Hilbert, who has been mysteriously missing since Sunday noon.

The pretty young woman, who is but twenty years old, went into the woods, telling her mother that she was going to study, in preparation for her work at Smith College, Northampton, which institution she was to enter on Monday.

She did not return at night, and not the faintest clew to her whereabouts has been found since. The woods and the banks and water of the Westfield River have been thoroughly searched without result. The lonely but beautiful spot where Miss Hilbert disappeared is ten miles from the nearest railroad or trolley line, and this makes the mystery all the deeper.

She was not known to have had any young men friends. She returned to her Summer home on Saturday from Springfield, where she had been the guest of Mrs. Annah Mayo. She had also called upon Miss Ruth Merriam, a chum, and her mother, who cannot in any way explain her disappearance.

"Father was in the brightest of spirits when she left us," said Mrs. Merriam today.

EVELYN THAW HERE; TALKS OF FUTURE PLANS

Wife of Stanford White's Slayer in Boston Gives Some Sidelights on Her Experiences.

BY GERTRUDE STEVENSON.

Evelyn Thaw is in Boston to-day, registered under an assumed name at the Adams House. Mrs. Thaw's coming to Boston was kept secret, and her mission here has been shrouded in mystery. She arrived incognito yesterday in her automobile from Portland, Me., with her chauffeur, Richard Gerry.

Mrs. Thaw's purpose in coming to the Hub at this time is reported to secure a theatrical engagement, now that her allowance has been cut and she is practically penniless.

Her brother, Howard Nesbit, is playing the part of the poet in Joe Weich and Mc-Ming, Nona and Nicki" company at the Globe Theatre.

The beautiful heroine of the famous Thaw murder trial last night attended the performance, met her brother after the show, and afterward held a consultation with him, in company with Joe Welch and his manager, Mr. Vion, at a private supper party.

Mrs. Thaw is just as wonderful and just as beautiful as when artists were raving about her in New York and took the picture of health. One is immediately impressed, however, with the little plaintive note in her voice and the subdued tone of her manner. In an exclusive interview with a BOSTON AMERICAN representative at the Globe Theatre this morning, where she had gone to see her brother rehearse, Mrs. Thaw chatted pleasantly of things and events. She was gowned in a plain simple tailored suit and wore a plain hat and heavy veil. At present she is completely wrapped up in her brother's future and their attitude toward each other is the most charming thing imaginable.

"It seems so strange to be behind the scenes at a theatre again," Mrs. Thaw remarked, "all somehow one couldn't help but think that the life of the stage still holds a great appeal for her.

Howard has had his notions of succeeding as an actor and his present work is very encouraging," Evelyn talked most affectionately of her "big brother," and how she said that the matter was in the hands of her attorneys and that it had been made far too much of. "It is just a private matter that will be adjusted," she concluded.

Says She Is Like the Play.

Her face is as innocent as a child's, and she looks out at you with her great clear eyes.

She is a most extraordinary woman and her manner is perfectly charming. The strain and stress of the past few years have left no marks upon her face. She still has the beauty that made her the reigning favorite of the "great white way."

Joe Welch, the actor, was so charmed with Mrs. Thaw that he offered her $5,000 a week to appear in any capacity, either in a sketch or as a public speaker. Mrs. Thaw said that she had no definite plans for the future and thanked Mr. Welch for his offer.

She declared she was not thinking of herself at all, and could hardly talk of anything but Howard and his new venture. He is apparently devoted to her. To the BOSTON AMERICAN representative Mrs. Thaw said:

"I sincerely hope that they will use Howard. I have every assurance that he will be given every consideration. I was disappointed that the rehearsal will not be held this morning, as I am so anxious to see how he is writing on and to look him in every way. He is so serious and ambitious about it, and has written all of the new hot which will be produced the latter part of the week.

Lives for Howard.

"I felt badly at first to think that Howard did not have a more prominent part, but, of course, as Mr. Vion says, he is just beginning and they will do everything to help him. Why—don't you know well the biggest people, actors and everybody, all have to start at the bottom, just think of Sam Goodwin and Robert Edeson. They began at the bottom, and if Howard works hard I don't see why he can't succeed, too, and then he is so clever at sketching besides. In all means as very much to me, for Howard is one of the few things I have to live for."

In regard to the suit against her by her brother, Mrs. Alice Hartrig, Mrs. Thaw said that the matter was in the hands of her attorneys and that it had been made far too much of. "It is just a private matter that will be adjusted," she concluded.

ROB WOMAN AS HUSBAND STOOD NEAR

BROCKTON, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Alexander Shepphe, thirty-two, of No. 27 River street, is confined to-day from the shock she received last night about 10 o'clock when she was held up and robbed on the corner of Belleyne and Swanzelle avenues, in the Montello section of the city.

She had been calling on a friend with her husband. On the way home her husband stopped to talk with neighbors, and Mrs. Shepphe strolled on alone. Two men stepped from behind a tree when she was less than 100 yards from her husband. The lights were so dim that he could not see.

One man pointed a revolver at her head while the other searched her clothing and even her stockings for money.

Finding none they grabbed her chatelaine watch from her shirt waist. As the men started to run, Mr. Shepphe approaching, the woman fell in a faint.

Her husband cared for her and then pursued the men, but they easily escaped.

BRYAN BACK AT TAFT WITH ANGRY RETORT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—In a long interview given out on the train between Baltimore and Philadelphia to-day William J. Bryan made a hot retort to Mr. Taft's statement of yesterday.

He accuses Mr. Taft of dodging and says that Mr. Taft knows as little about my record as he does about the public questions which he is attempting to discuss."

He denies that he favored government ownership of railroads, but says he does want regulation. He charges that Mr. Taft made a mistake of $114,000,000 in his estimate of the cost of imperialism.

HILL'S REFUSAL ENDS ANTI-HUGHES FIGHT

AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN OUT OF RACE—GOVERNOR HAS OPEN FIELD.

SARATOGA, Sept. 15.—With the receipt of a cablegram here at noon to-day from Ambassador to Berlin, Germany, stating that he would not accept the nomination of Governor of New York if it were formally offered to him, the anti-Hughes men were routed.

It appeared as the convention assembled at 2 o'clock that the opposition to the present Governor for re-nomination had collapsed.

The agreement of the united anti-Hughes men on Professor Hill was brought about at 3 o'clock this morning as a dramatic climax to one of the most remarkable conferences ever held at a political State convention. The conference, after agreeing on Ambassador Hill and calling him of the decision, took a recess.

The leaders of the opposition to the renomination of Governor Hughes and some boosters who had already quit opposing the Governor, met last night in the cottage of Timothy L. Woodruff. After a short consultation they sent for the Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of State and chairman of this convention.

The Secretary of State listened to all the arguments advanced and then he told the members of the conference that he could not in honor accept the nomination for Governor. He said he was in a measure here as the personal representative of President Roosevelt and that the President favored the renomination of Governor Hughes.

After all attempts at agreement on some man whose name had been under consideration had failed, George W. Aldridge of Rochester advanced the name of Professor Hill.

AFFINITY EARLE INNOCENT, SAYS FOND MOTHER

"I Would Take His Word Against the Whole World," She Declares.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—In a spirited defence of her son, Ferdinand Pinney Earle, of affinity fame, Mrs. General Ferdinand P. Earle, upon her arrival to-day on the North German Lloyd liner Grosser Kurfurst, declared that she believed the artist had done nothing wrong and that she would stand by him at his trial on the charge of beating his "soul mate" wife, who was Julia Ruttner.

"There has already been too much printed about this affair," said Mrs. Earle, "but I want to announce once and for all that I believe implicitly in my son and do not think that he has done anything improper. It is my son's private affair and I want it understood that I stand by him in what he has done. There are always two sides to every question and his side has yet to be told.

"I have just received a letter from him in which he says everything. He assures me he is innocent and I would take his word against that of the whole world."

NURSE ADMITS THEFT OF DEAD GIRL'S CLOTHES

Pleads Guilty in Newton Court to Taking Garments Belonging to Patient.

Miss Margery B. Blultte, a trained nurse, pleaded guilty in Newton District Court to-day to stealing some of the clothes which had been worn by a girl, now dead, who had been her patient.

This girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Poore of Summer street, Newton Centre. Miss Blultte went to the house two months ago, when Miss Poore was suffering from the illness from which she died soon after Miss Blultte came there.

After Miss Blultte left the father and mother missed clothes which they knew their daughter had owned. This included dresses and underwear.

Miss Blultte was arrested. At first she claimed all the clothes were given to her by Miss Poore before death, but in court to-day she said she took morphine occasionally, that she became mentally irresponsible when she did, and that she might have stolen some of the garments during one of these periods.

Judge Baron fined her $20 and gave her till to-morrow to raise the money. Mr. Poore, who came into court to testify against Miss Blultte, was so affected by the story of his daughter's death being revived that he asked the court to be lenient with the nurse.

MILL WAGES CUT AS HOURS INCREASE

WHITINSVILLE, Sept. 15.—Notices have been posted in the Linwood and Whitinsville cotton mills advising employes of the schedule that went into effect to-day in these mills. The mills have been working forty hours a week during the last times, and will now go on a new schedule of fifty hours a week. Another notice has been posted also to the effect that there will be a reduction in wages beginning Sept. 21, to make the prices conform to that in other mills which some time ago suffered a cutdown.

MINE WORKERS OF PROVINCES MEET

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 15.—The Provincial Workmen's Association is in special important session here to-day to decide whether they will join themselves with the United Mine Workers of America in a body. It is thought that by allying itself with the United Mine Workers the association will be in a position to make demands, and, aided by the powerful mine workers' organization, enforce them.

SCHOOLS OPEN IN CHELSEA ON HALF SESSION

The Chelsea schools opened to-day with about 1,700 less pupils and thirty-five less teachers than last year. The schools will be run in half sessions during the entire year. Half of the pupils will attend a three and a half hour session in the forenoon and the other a like session in the afternoon.

This was made necessary by the burning of the greater part of the city's school buildings in the great fire. The new twenty-four-room school building now under construction on the site of the old City Hall is not expected to be ready for occupancy before school closes next Summer.

LEAPS TO DEATH WHEN NURSE GOES

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—During the absence of his nurse, Philip Schultz, a salesman, thirty years old, jumped from the window on the first floor of his home at No. 137 East One Hundred and Third street to-day and died soon after being carried into his home.

ARNOLD MILLS CHIEF ON TRIAL

Foreman Norman Thackeray of the Arnold Print Works, Nevin Adams, was on trial in the United States District Court to-day on a charge of importing strict cotton from England for the Arnold plant.

Bernard Trowell and Clifford Gaillard of Lewis, England, testified that they came to Boston early in the Spring and that they were promised $8.50 a week, that their railroad tickets were paid, and they were advanced $27.50 apiece to get into the country.

GREAT RACING AHEAD AT BIG FALL MEETS

Although the racing season of 1908 has been a busy one, full of excitement and phenomenal achievements, it seems possible and even probable, that its last days are to be the greatest. The crack two and three-year-old trotters and pacers that will meet in futurity engagements at Columbus and Lexington will be the greatest in the history of the light-harness horse.

As the greatness of a great man only serves as a stimulus for some other man to surpass him, even so it seems to be with the trotting horse.

SAILS WITH REPORT UPON VENEZUELA

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Baron von Arbeck, commander of the Dutch cruiser Gelderland, has left to investigate Venezuelan conditions, sailed to-day on the Holland-American liner Noordam, where he will make his report to the Dutch government.

BURGLARS LOOT A PRISON.

London, Sept. 15.—During English burglaries have broken into Portsmouth prison, and robbed the warders' clubroom. They worked leisurely and carried off all the valuables they could find, including much silver plate. The warders reported the burglary to Scotland Yard and were laughed at for their pains.

HARRIMAN'S STOCKS BULL

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—E. H. Harriman returned to Wall street in force to-day for the first time since his return from the far West. The stock market has been heavy for the early part of the week, but active and strong shortly after he arrived at his office. Union Pacific sold at a new high level, and Southern Pacific came within a small fraction of its previous high record. Mr. Harriman refused to express any definite opinion on the market or the outlook, but in the rumors about regarding new financing of Southern Pacific.

"The Devil" to Be Published in the Sunday American

"THE DEVIL," novelized by Joseph O'Brien from the great play of Franz Molnar, will begin as a serial in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

No play in a dozen years has attracted so much attention as this masterpiece which is being produced in New York by two rival companies and is now being played here at the Castle Square Theatre.

It is a tragedy of the heart and conscience.

It carries a lesson for every man and woman.

As a novel, none of the power of the play nor any of its detail or dialogue has been lost.

"The Devil" will appear EXCLUSIVELY in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

It's first five chapters will be published in next Sunday's American.

You cannot afford to miss the opening instalment.

SENT TO JAIL FOR HOLD-UP

For holding up and robbing John Coughlan of Quincy of his watch and chain in Essex street last night, a man describing himself as Alexander Lowney of No. 6 Park street, Charlestown, was to-day sent to jail for six months by Judge Burke in the Municipal Court.

READING LEADS IN DULL MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Reading was the feature during the first half-hour of trading in the stock market to-day. It opened a new high record, 137½. Interest in the market seemed to lag in the early trading, and the professionals were waiting for Mr. Harriman to give some indication of his intentions for the immediate future.

THIRTY-SIX FREE EUROPEAN TOURS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will send the thirty-six most popular SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS in Boston and Suburbs on free European tours.

These tours will include

BRYAN'S OFFER TO TRADE SUPPORT WITH HEARST

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE'S EXACT WORDS AT NEW YORK DINNER MADE PUBLIC.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 15.—William R. Hearst of New York has given to the Associated Press a statement in reference to the published denial by William J. Bryan of the statement made by Mr. Hearst in his speech at the formal notification of John Temple Graves of his nomination for the vice-presidency by the Independence party. The statement follows:

"Of course, Mr. Bryan cannot deny being at my house, for Mr. Chanler in his suit made affidavit that he saw him there. Of course, he cannot deny that he met me at the dinner, because Dr. Gardner and Mr. Murphy and Mark Cross were present at the dinner at Dr. Cox's house at which I found Mr. Bryan.

"I would not have mentioned Dr. Cox's name, but Mr. Bryan has seen fit to do so. Therefore, the whole truth might as well come out.

Bryan's Promise of Support.

"After the dinner Mr. Bryan drew me aside in the hall while Dr. Cox politely entertained the other gentlemen.

"Mr. Bryan said: 'I think I can say positively that I will be the next Democratic nominee and I believe I will be elected. My position in history is secure. I intend to serve only one term.

"'If you support the Democratic ticket you will naturally be the nominee next time, and if you support the nomine this campaign. I will, of course, support your next campaign.'

"If this statement is susceptible of any other construction than the one I put upon it, then I should apologize to Mr. Bryan, and if it is not susceptible of any other construction, then Mr. Bryan should apologize to me."

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 15.—Dr. John H. Gardner, who was mentioned by William R. Hearst in his statement at Atlanta regarding Bryan's offer to trade support, recalls the dinner given by Dr. John M. Cox at which the three met. He said:

"I was not surprised at Mr. Hearst's original statement in Atlanta in which he said that Mr. Bryan offered to support Mr. Hearst four years hence in return for Mr. Hearst's support this campaign.

"It was obviously a harmony dinner. Dr. Cox had come to see me before the dinner to urge me to come to it. Before that Mr. Bryan had sent several persons to me for the purpose of making an appointment to see me. I had not seen him for three years previously and was not seeking him.

"On Dr. Cox urging I agreed to go to the dinner. I think it was on a Sunday night. I found Dr. Cox and Mr. P. J. Murphy, of Mark Cross, when I arrived at Dr. Cox's house. My recollection is that Mr. Bryan then arrived, and lastly Mr. Hearst.

"Messrs. Bryan and Hearst were left alone together several times. I remember two occasions in particular because by Dr. Cox took Mr. Murphy and myself to the billiard room, leaving Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bryan together. It impressed itself on my mind because, on leaving the room, I remarked to Messrs. Bryan and Hearst that I was glad I was not a presidential candidate, and felt privileged to take an appetite before dinner.

"The second occasion when they were conspicuously alone together was after dinner. Dr. Cox, Mr. Murphy and I went into the library while Mr. Bryan and Mr. Hearst remained in the hall for some time. I, of course, do not know what conversation occurred between them.

"The statement Mr. Hearst gave to the Associated Press, I believe, because the dinner was designed as a 'harmony' dinner and its obvious purpose was to bring about an amicable and co-operative spirit between Mr. Bryan and Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bryan and myself."

HUB GOLFER ARRESTED ON GIRLS' CHARGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Brice S. Evans, the interscholastic golf champion of Boston for two years, who lives at No. 332 Bay State road, Boston, and John T. Kelly of No. 203 Berkeley place, Brooklyn, were arrested yesterday in the home of Oscar Richards, the banker, at No. 46 East Seventy-second street. The two young men were friends of Harold Richards, a son of the banker.

Evans, who is twenty years old, said that he was a member of the class of '11, Amherst. The two young men had been on a yacht cruise with the banker's son, and he invited them to stay with him for a few days, the rest of the family being in Europe.

Evans, in bed when the door opened and in walks Mr. Kelly," Anna Swanson, the maid, told Magistrate Wahle in the Yorkville Police Court when the two young men were arraigned yesterday. "I screamed and Bridget Murfin, the maid, put her head out of the window and called a policeman.

Kelly said he did not intend to frighten the woman. His attack had stopped and knowing there was an alarm clock in the servant's room he went there to see what time it was, he explained. The magistrate fined him $10 and discharged Evans, who went to Garden City and qualified in the golf championship.

GIRL IS NEARLY BURNED TO DEATH

While playing with matches during her mothers' absence, five-year-old Margaret Lydon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Lydon, set fire to the lace curtains in her home at No. 2 Hampshire place, Cambridge, to-day. Her clothes caught fire, and the little one is dying at the Cambridge Relief Hospital. The fire in the house was quickly put out by the department.

FITZGERALD IN SECLUSION TO 'THINK IT OVER'

"Brother Henry" usually knows where "John" is, and his positive declaration of ignorance to-day is taken as rather confirmation of the belief that the former Mayor has tucked himself somewhere where he will not be disturbed while he is "thinking it over."

JAPAN TO GIVE UP ARMY, NAVY PLANS

TOKIO, Sept. 15.—In fulfilment of the policy of retrenchment outlined by Premier Katsura, the government will find it necessary to economize most extensively in the matter of military and naval developments.

FIERCE FIGHT WITH BEAR.

Seward, Alaska, Sept. 15.—Harry Johnson, a prospector, who had been in the hills about twenty miles north of Seward for the past two months, was attacked recently by a large silver-tip bear and badly injured. As Johnson turned a clump of alders he came face to face with the bear. The animal closed with him and tore him badly.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR BISHOP POTTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The memory of Bishop Henry C. Potter, who died at his Summer home in Cooperstown, N. Y., July 21, is to be honored by an imposing funeral and public service in Grace Church on October 20, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration.

ROYAL WORCESTER BON TON CORSETS

TO ALL DRESSMAKERS AND WEARERS OF CORSETS:

The radical change in dress fashions induces the Dressmakers' Protective Association of America to demonstrate these new corset models in their 1908 Convention.

Free Demonstration Tonight before the great gathering of dressmakers at Horticultural Hall, Boston.

Corset education was never so necessary as now. Directoire styles are dominated by lines secured by the corset.

ROYAL WORCESTER AND BON TON CORSETS

REPUBLIC BRINGING MORMONS TO BOSTON

Local White Star officials received a cable from Queenstown giving the numbers aboard the Republic, that is due here next Sunday. She is bringing the largest saloon list of the year to this port—there being 240, most of them New Englanders. There are a lot of Mormons among the 240 second cabin passengers. The exact number is believed to be about 160. The Republic's steerage list comprises 305.

BALLARD WON LONG RACE AT BARBECUE

POINT OF PINES, Sept. 15.—A big field of amateur athletes competed in the games held in connection with the Republican barbecue, several Olympic stars being on the marks. The gold watch prizes were the big attraction to the competing athletes. All the local clubs were represented in all the events which were handicaps. Alderman Ellery Clark competed in the three-quarter and won second place as well as a place in the high jump. Ballard, the New England champion, won the three-mile race from Jimmy Lee of the B. A. A. The summaries:

One hundred-yard dash, scratch race—Won by Charles H. Bulkley of St. Alphonsus A. C. of Chelsea; George K. Riley of St. Alphonsus A. C., second; Arthur W. Wade of Brookline A. A., third. Time, 10 2-5 seconds.

Putting sixteen-pound shot—Won by James J. Comerford of Brookline A. A.; W. H. Andrews of South Boston A. C., second; J. A. Walsh of Hopedale, third. Distance, 40 feet 7 inches.

Three-mile run—Won by Joseph J. Ballard of Providence Tech.; J. J. Lee of B. A. A., second; C. Wiseman of Boston, third.

Two-yard run—Won by H. A. Barrett of Roxbury; James Burke of Wakefield, second; O. F. Medford of Brookline A. A., third.

Running broad jump—Won by Carl D. Roberts of Everett; J. Cody of Cambridge Gymnasium, second; Arthur H. B. Wright of Charlestown, third. Distance—21 feet 8½ inches.

Running high jump—Won by Herbert A. Hodgdon of B. A. A.; A. L. Ross of C. O. A., second; Ellery H. Clark of B. A. A., third. Distance—5 feet 2 inches.

Fifty-six-pound weight—Won by S. P. Gillis of B. A. A.; Ellery H. Clark of B. A. A., second; E. A. Sherman of Boston, third. Distance—34 feet 4½ inches.

WIFE-SLAYER JORDAN LIKES PRISON LIFE

Chester S. Jordan, the accused wife-slayer, is leading a contented life in Middlesex County Jail. He knows that his trial is a long way off yet, probably not before next January, and he is readily adapting himself to prison life, with the exception of the prison fare.

This he does not eat now, as his brother, Elmer, has arranged with a nearby restaurant to furnish Chester with all his meals. Here is the routine of his daily life:

Rises 6:30 in the morning. Breakfasts at 7, and is allowed one hour's exercise every morning in a large room. A guard is with him constantly. He only exercises in walking. Dinner at 12, supper at 6, lights out at 8, and then to bed.

Jordan is allowed all of the daily papers and the current magazines. Many of the latter are furnished by his brother-in-law, James L. Livermore, the New York millionaire cotton broker. In the library of the jail are 1,500 books and already Jordan has read many of these. In fact, he spends most of his time reading.

He is allowed one visit a day, not including calls by his attorneys, who come as often as they desire. Several persons may call at one time.

On Sunday he gets one hour's fresh air and sunshine, for he is allowed to walk under guard for that length of time in the jail yard. Here is a sample of his menu for a day:

Breakfast—Half cantaloupe, cereal, boiled eggs, toast and coffee.

Dinner—Roast beef, potatoes, tomatoes, bread, bread and butter pudding, vanilla ice cream and coffee.

Supper—Steak, French fried potatoes, hot rolls, stewed pears and tea.

Jordan is cheerful and makes a model prisoner.

PROVE BOON TO HOUSEKEEPERS

The lunch question is always a serious one with housekeepers. When entertaining guests it is desired to have something light and palatable to serve and if it is dainty so much the better.

To be able to have in the house an edible which can always be kept fresh and tempting at hand is certainly a boon. That is why Nabisco Sugar Wafers are so much in vogue.

They are especially in favor in homes where the best social usage prevails. They are decidedly "good form." There is about them that touch of nicety and refinement which appeals. They are always in favor whether served with luncheon or dinner in the house or out on the shady lawn.

CONFERENCE OF LEAGUE VOTERS

There will be a conference and smoke talk by the members of the City Committee and enrolled voters of the Independence League at the headquarters of the party, Room 348, old South building, next Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

The conference will be a very important one, and those who are interested in the success of the new party and the great campaign it espouses are earnestly requested to be present by Chairman John T. Dohig of the City Committee.

Matters relating to the primaries, which occur on the 22d, general preliminary campaign work and other important matter will be under discussion. Chairman Dohig will explain the plans of the Independence League campaign, so far as they have been formulated.

CALLS SESSION OF ALDERMEN

Mayor Hibbard to-day issued a call for a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen for next Monday afternoon to take action on his appointment of both trustees and deputy sealers of weights and measures.

Yesterday the board adjourned until October 5. Unless the deputy sealers appointed by the Mayor are confirmed by the Aldermen before October 1 they will have to comply with civil service applicants as the department will be governed by civil service rules after that date.

ADDICKS'S FAMOUS NEWPORT VILLA SOLD

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—Belvoir, the famous Summer villa of J. Edward Addicks, of Delaware, has been sold to Arthur Curtiss James of New York for $100,000.

FERNALD'S PLURALITY NOW 7,700

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 15.—Later returns from the Maine State elections to-day give Bert M. Fernald of Portland, Republican, 72,405 votes and Gardiner, the Democratic candidate, 65,076.

These figures are the returns from 468 cities, towns and plantations. There are twenty-five small towns and twenty-six plantations to hear from.

The missing districts gave Cobb, Republican, 1,117 votes in 1904, and Davis, Democrat, 451.

Figuring in the missing returns on this basis, Fernald will have a final plurality of 7,700 over Gardiner, the smallest Republican majority in forty years and an estimated Republican loss of 2,000 votes from the Iowa votes for the head of the ticket.

HUB READY TO WELCOME IRISH ENVOYS FRIDAY

Boston's reception and welcome to the Irish envoys, John E. Redmond, M. P., Joseph Devlin, M. P., and John Fitzgibbon, who are in come here Friday evening to attend the convention of the United Irish League, will be a hearty and spontaneous greeting to these distinguished men. Preparations are about complete.

Mr. Redmond and his fellow envoys are due to arrive in New York to-morrow evening on the steamer Oceanic. In New York they are to be tendered a reception Thursday evening by the New York City branches of the United Irish League at the Hoffman House.

The visitors are due to arrive in Boston Friday evening at 6 o'clock.

SAYS CHELSEA CONTRACTORS WERE WARNED

At the continued hearing of Contractors Morris Seegal and Morris Gordon of Chelsea, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of eight men in the collapse of the building next to Odd Fellows' Hall on Aug. 25, Building Inspector Frank Wentworth testified in the Chelsea court that ten minutes before the crash he had warned the contractors.

He said that a large mortise had been cut into the bricks of the old walls near the foundation and that he declared it unsafe.

Two other witnesses were called. Jacob Cohen, one of the carpenters, said that grooves were cut in the brick wall large enough to accommodate three floor timbers instead of one, and that sand had been dug away under the foundation walls.

JAILS HUSBAND FOR DESERTING WIFE AND BABE

Tells of Trip to England While Helpmeet Fights Battle Alone.

LITTLE ONE WAS SICK

Duncan Ingraham, a shoe cutter of Cambridgeport, who last April disappeared, leaving his young wife, Mabelle Bourne Ingraham, and her ailing one-year-old baby, Edna, was to-day found guilty of wantonly abandoning his family by Judge Wolcott in the Cambridge District Court. He was committed to the House of Correction.

"He left me last April," said the wife as she sat on the witness stand, her baby in her arms. "He left me without saying a word. Baby was sick and I was distracted. This is a strange land to me. Finally I went to the police and they sent me to the Associated Charities, who were kind to me. They put me in a home in Malden and then later in Georgetown, where baby and I now live and I work. My husband hasn't given me a penny since last April and never wrote me."

Ingraham, when asked what he had to say, spoke out: "Your Honor, I left Cambridge and my wife and baby to get work in Rockton. As I failed, then I went and worked my way to England on a steamer. I got work but soon fell ill of pneumonia. When I got well enough I worked my way back here to them."

"I find you guilty," said the Judge. "You are to pay $25 for the benefit of your wife or stand committed to the House of Correction."

Ingraham didn't have the money.

FLOATING HOSPITAL ENDS SEASON TO-DAY

The Boston Floating Hospital makes its last trip of the season to-day, "Grandmother's day," named by an anonymous donor, and at 4:30 this afternoon the ship of mercy goes out of commission until next Summer. This evening the nurses will be given their diplomas on board the vessel and there will be an entertainment.

Many of the convalescent children were removed yesterday, but those in the permanent wards will not be transferred until this evening, being given the benefit of the sea air as long as possible.

"I MAY as well say that the data are extremely meagre—in fact, beyond the young lady's name and parentage, they are non-existent; but I have no doubt that with the vast resources at my disposal, I shall be able to give you some more or less definite information in the course of the next few days."

"I trust you will—most heartily, I hope so."

"For the purpose of apprising you at the earliest moment of our success, should the case address."

"Hotel Russell."

"Thank you," Magruder coughed. "I may mention that in all cases I undertake it is usual for the client, as a proof of his bona fides—not that I doubt yours for a moment, sir—still, it is usual——"

"To give a check, eh?"

"Quite so."

"Well, how much do you want on account?"

"That is generally left to the client. Still, if I say one hundred dollars——"

"Very good." And the "client" produced a pocketbook. "I'll give you notes. I have not yet opened an account at any bank. Indeed, I have not had time to see after it, seeing that I only arrived in North America the day before yesterday. Five twenties."

"Thank you. One moment, and I'll make out the receipt. You may rely on us doing our utmost. Allow me," and Mr. Magruder listened to show his client out.

"Jimmy, my boy," said Mr. Magruder when the door was shut, "you've struck oil. A sane Jimmy a mute—take the most of him while you have got the chance; it won't last long. Margaret Armour! Capital, capital! I should surely be able to tip him for a hundred or two before I lead him to Spa Theatre."

An office boy of four feet nothing, in a uniform of dark green and gold, with a cap whereon "Magruder's Agency" blushed in crimson letters, popped an impudent head in at an inner door.

"Take this twenty-dollar bill, Simpkins, and fetch me a bottle of Roederer '93 from the Astor House. And be quick." The boy vanished. "Yes, Miss Margaret Armour, we'll drink your very good health, and we'll also drink the very good health of your excellent and confiding——Come in!"

Another "client" entered. It was raining business.

CHAPTER XX.

The Rage of Mimi

A T a quarter to five Mrs. Brinch called up the Spa Theatre on the telephone to say that Miss Armour had decided to take Mr. Hawkman's advice and play that night—that she might the better forget her grief for her dead friend, Stella Gordon.

But the theatre telephone was busy when Mrs. Brinch called, and she asked the boy at the switchboard in the flat if he would attend to the matter and see that the message was delivered to Mr. Hawkman at the theatre the instant he could get a connection on the wire. This the boy promised to do—and then forgot to perform the act.

And so Mr. Hawkman, having waited until 5:30 for word from Miss Armour, sent a messenger in a cab to Mimi van Alster's rooms to tell her of her good luck.

Miss van Alster had been for the last few days in a highly nervous state. She had taken on more liquor candies and pricks of the morphine needle than were good for even her. So, at the joyful piece of news, she went completely off her head. Her first act was to take a pinch of morphine to quiet her nerves, and the next to send a line by messenger to the Honorable George Rosenstyne.

"I'm the Dear Girl. Whoop! MIMI."—that was all she wrote.

Margaret got to the theatre at half-past seven and went straight to her dressing room. Her "dresser" was not there, but as Mrs. Brinch accompanied her the lack was not felt, and Margaret did not trouble to hunt her up. Margaret's first call was at five minutes to eight; she wondered that the boy did not open the door and cry as usual "Overture, Miss Armour." But she had her watch on the table beside her, and with her eye on the hands went on with her dressing. Her second call was at 8:15; again the boy did not come. She put down his non-appearance to general disorganization after the four days' closing of the theatre.

The "Dear Girl" made her appearance on the stage at 8:20. At 8:17 Margaret rushed from her room, tripped downstairs, and took her accustomed place in the wings, greatly to the astonishment of Toddy, who stared at her as if she had been a ghost.

Miss van Alster was called at 8:15. She sclosed a hypodermic syringe, and, pricking up a fold of skin, run the needle into it and slowly injected her dose of morphine. She rubbed the irritated skin with her palm, pressing the drug into the surrounding tissues.

Mimi's Curse

"Got to hurry, Miss van Alster," said the boy from the door; "you've only got a minute to get down."

"Yep, I've gotten time."

She sprang up and hurried away to make her conquest of New York.

Now, it so happened that night that Elsie Melton was in a bad temper, and hurried the work of the opening chorus. Thus, instead of finishing at eight-twenty, ready for the "Dear Girl's" entrance, he was done at eight-nineteen.

The music changed in rhythm. The lights shone strongly toward the Prompt entrance.

Crash! Bang! Bong!—a long chord.

Margaret went on amid a whirlwind of cheering.

Mimi van Alster arrived in the wings. She was dreaming, surely; she had taken too much morphine, and all this was mere phantasy. She tried to brush past Toddy, but Toddy held her arm.

"Where you going? Be a good girl—don't make a scene," he whispered, half sorry for her.

"Leeme go!

"Leganne go! It's my entrance."

"Didn't be a fool now."

"Is that Margaret Armour?"

"Yes; there's been some mistake. The guv'nor'll put it all straight for you. You won't be the loser, Mimi. It's hard luck, I know. But——"

Margaret was singing. "I'm your funny little sunny little Honey Girl"——

A wild burst of hysterical laughter cut through the music and reached the audience. Margaret faltered for a moment, but recovered and went on.

If Toddy and half a dozen chorus girls to get Mimi van Alster back to her dressing room.

"Little beast's got murder in her blood," said Toddy to Hawkman as they went back to the wings. "I'll have to give Armour hear her say, 'Now I have for this'? Chloroform, my luggage, on my life, she is."

Threats of Vengeance

Often enough in the succeeding days did dark hints reach Margaret of threats of vengeance made against her by Mimi van Alster for having snatched glory from her at the very last minute. This talk and gossip hurt the sensitive girl, but, after all, she told herself with a contemptuous shrug was Alster do me? I am the star of the Spa, and the star of the Spa I mean to remain. And as for vengeance—come, come, twentieth century.

Don't they?

What about Stella Gordon?

With that her thoughts went off at a tangent to her father. She had not forgiven him for his frauds, nor for his greater fraud of going on living, nor for his attempt to recapture her affection by posing as her uncle, the greatest fraud of all. Yet she could not help remembering the boyish wistfulness of his look as it followed her about the room; indeed, just before Stella's death she had begun to feel a certain indefinite softening of the heart for his regard. Then came the tragedy, followed by the discovery of the similarity of the Black Hands' And she knew her father for the murderer.

Under the terrible knowledge, under the crushing certainty, many a girl would have succumbed, but Margaret Armour was not one of the helpless, clinging creatures of sentimental romance; she was, for all her youth, a woman of character almost Puritanic in its singleness and sternness of purpose. She could not bring herself to denounce her father—that would be asking too much from flesh and blood—but she could, and she would, urge him to make the only reparation in his power, useless as even that might be.

If he had dealt death; death could be his only redeemer. She must have strength enough to tell him so, strength enough, too, to insist upon it.

Margaret Armour was going that afternoon to meet Lucian Falconer. She had to speak frankly and plainly to him, too, and in such a way that he could not possibly mistake her meaning. It would be pain for him to listen, just as it would be pain for her to speak; she would have given the world to escape the task; but it had to be done. Love, marriage, all the dreams of youth known when passion sings in the heart, must be renounced. It was impossible that she, the daughter of a murderer, the bearer of a name smirched by guilty gold and innocent blood, could link that dishonored name with Lucian's; to her mind it seemed almost criminal.

Yes, it would be agony for both, but an agony, she told herself, that had to be borne.

CHAPTER XXI.

A T the same hour as Margaret Armour, torn by many emotions, made her way to meet Lucian Falconer to tell him that she could never be his wife, Mr. Magruder, private research agent of Beekman street, was receiving in his sanctum the boeotic gentlemen we have already met at the same address.

"Everything is going well," said Mr. Magruder. "My men are on the young lady's track, and if I have nothing definite to show, be assured that it is not owing to lack of zeal."

The boeotic gentlemen sat very still. "I have out three of my best men on the young lady's track," went on Magruder, "three men who cost a good deal——"

"Ah! that reminds me," interrupted the other. "I know that your kind of work means a lot of money; that one can't move about New York without spending. You have still in hand some of what I paid you the other day, I hope?"

"You are very good," smirked Mr. Magruder. "Permit me to consult my petty cash book. Ah! as suspected—yes, here we are!" He dipped his nose into a little black pass-book. "Extraordinary coincidence! Strange you should have spoken about it! There remain precisely fifteen dollars."

"Then," said the other, "I'll trouble you for that fifteen dollars, and that leaves a balance of eighty-five."

The book fell from Mr. Magruder's hands.

"Eh?" he ejaculated.

"I said that I would trouble you for that fifteen dollars, and I also want that eighty-five dollars."

"What do you mean?"

"Exactly what I say."

"I don't understand you," Mr. James Magruder rose to his feet. "This stranges sat still.

"You infernal thief! You scoundrel! You take my money on the pretext that you will find Margaret Armour. You pretend that it will be a work of great difficulty, a work demanding tact and patience. And all the time you knew, as well as I knew you, that Margaret Armour was at the Spa Theatre. You took me for a simple jay, you couldn't tell a from a bull's foot, and you meant to bleed me. I find Margaret Armour's name on every billboard, I go to the Spa Theatre, I see her act, and I recognize her—she is unmistakably an Armour. Half a dollar to the stage-door keeper gets me her private address. Hand over my money, you cheat, or I'll have you at the Tombs as sure as my name is——"

"The Tombs!" snarled Mr. Magruder. He dashed to the inner door, and opening it, shouted, "Simpkins!"

TAFT

Also Makes Speech Records for the Edison Phonograph

WE are now able to offer twelve Records made by William Howard Taft for use on the Edison Phonograph.

The selection of Edison Records by Mr. Taft as a vehicle for giving the telling points of his Speech of Acceptance the widest currency is another tribute to the genius of Edison and the Phonograph which he has made.

Some newspapers say that Taft is unwilling that Bryan should monopolize so useful a campaign ally as the Edison Phonograph. Whether that is true or not, here are the Edison Records made by Taft himself, giving his voice and inflection upon subjects of interest to every voter.

Whether you hear Taft speak personally or not, you can get almost the same effect by listening to these Edison Records.

The twelve Taft Records are as follows:

Foreign Missions	The Philippines
Irish Humor	Enforced Insurance of Bank Deposits
Republican and Democratic Treatment of Trusts	Jury Trial in Contempt Cases
The Rights of Labor	The Farmer and the Republican Party
Unlawful Trusts	Rights and Progress of the Negro
Function of Next Administration
Roosevelt Policies

These Records may be heard at all Edison dealers. 35 cents each.

REPORT TWO DEAD IN $400,000 SACO FIRE

FIFTY FAMILIES HOMELESS; FLAMES JUMPED RIVER, MENACING BIDDEFORD.

SACO, Me., Sept. 15.—Two lives have been lost, one man badly injured, fifty families turned out of house and home, eighteen millions of feet of lumber destroyed and a total loss of more than $400,000 are to-day known to be the grim results of fire which broke out in the main mill of the George A. Crosman & Sons Company, box manufacturers, here shortly after midnight.

Five engines were rushed here from Biddeford, just across the river, Portland, Dover, Portsmouth, Sanford and Kennebunk. Portland sent two engines by special train which made the thirty-mile run in seventeen minutes.

Strong wind fanned a tiny spark in the Crosman lumber mill to a roaring flame. The months of drought here has made everything like tinder, and the fire spread in every direction with incredible rapidity.

Flames Jump River.

Once Biddeford, just across the Saco River, was threatened when the flames leaped clear across the river and ignited the mill of the Diamond Match Company in that town, but prompt action extinguished the flames with small damage. Several houses in Biddeford were also set on fire by flying sparks.

Twenty-three dwelling houses here in Saco were destroyed, the fifty families being forced to flee from their homes in their night clothing. To-day the large vacant lots near the destroyed homes of these French Canadians who worked in the lumber mills are filled with piles of household belongings.

To-day the refugees are being cared for by the French Institute and the city of Saco. Scores faced death, but so far as known but one man perished.

When the fire was at its fiercest a man, a woman and two children, housed in between the burning homes and the lumber yards of the Crosman and Diamond Match companies and the river were seen to rush down to the water's edge, driven there by the blinding heat.

Boat Was Overturned.

They secured a small boat and put off for the Biddeford side. When near shore their craft was overturned by a floating log. The woman and children were seen to clamber over the logs of the drive to the Biddeford side, but the man disappeared. Mrs. Lucy Pressart of No. 21 Irving street is also reported missing.

Frank J. Gerrib, who was fighting the flames from a lumber pile suffered a broken right ankle when the lumber slipped away from under him.

The fire was under control at 5:30 o'clock and was extinguished by 9.

The losses are estimated at fully $400,000. The Diamond Match Company's plant at Saco was practically destroyed and 10,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $250,000, consumed. The blanket insurance with a New York company covers 90 per cent. of the loss.

The mill of the George A. Crosman & Sons Company, box manufacturers, was destroyed along with eight millions of feet of lumber. The loss is $100,000 and the insurance will cover 90 per cent. The Crosman mill, which employed seventy-five men, will be rebuilt.

WAR VETERAN SLAIN FOR PENSION MONEY

WESTON, W. Va., Sept. 15.—William B. McNemar, a Civil War veteran, aged sixty-five years old, was found dead in the willows bordering Polk Creek, on the outskirts of this city, shortly after having received his pension check. The body bore wounds supposed to have been inflicted with a club found near by. Jason Pennegar has been arrested pending the coroner's verdict.

HOLD CHILD-WIFE ON LARCENY CHARGE

On the testimony of her own [illegible] pretty Italian child wife, Mrs. Antonio Bianchi, whose husband is in Quebec, [illegible] barred over to $800 for the [illegible] by Judge Sullivan in the city [illegible] the alleged larceny of $185 from [illegible] er's trunk in their home, [illegible] street, South End, while [illegible] who has been paying her [illegible] and who was arraigned as [illegible] was discharged.

CHELSEA GIRL HELD FOR HOTEL THEFT

Florence Ardell, alias Carlton, a pretty blonde, who told Judge Duff in the Municipal Court to-day that she was twenty-two years old and lived in Chelsea, was held in $1,000 by the Grand Jury on the charges of stealing $2,085 from Frank W. West of Malden. The theft occurred a year ago at a West End hotel.

RALLY FOR REIDY IN WARD 15 TO-NIGHT

Michael J. Reidy, candidate for the Legislature in Ward 15; James F. Creed and Thomas J. Condon will be the speakers at a rally to be held in the warehouse, corner Dorchester and Fourth streets, at 8 o'clock this evening. Mr. Reidy is the eastern member of the executive board of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union.

FOWLER FORGERY CASE CONTINUED

Frank W. Fowler of Toronto, Canada, who was recently arraigned in the Police Court, charged with forging the name of the Metropolitan Iron & Steel Company of Ohio to a note for over $10,000, reappeared in the Municipal Court to-day before Judge Duff. Through his counsel, John A. Cronkhurst, the case was continued until September 29. Fowler is out under $5,000 bonds, a surety company being his bondsmen.

ARISTOCRAT FINED $50 FOR LIQUOR SALE

Richard W. Melville of Swampscott, who has a residence in the aristocratic Beach Bluff district of that town, where many Summer cottagers reside, pleaded guilty in Lynn District Court to-day to illegal sale of liquor and paid a fine of $50.

A sensation was created when the Swampscott police raided Melville's elegant home Saturday night, September 5.

The police seized seventy bottles of ale, fifty-three of beer and two quarts of white key. Melville claimed the liquor was not for sale, but was for entertainment of his friends and friends. In court to-day, however, he pleaded guilty to the illegal selling charge.

ARCANUM CLUB HONORS REGENT

The Royal Arcanum Club of Massachusetts, a social organization connected with the Royal Arcanum order, will honor Grand Regent John J. Hogan with a "festival of esteem," to take place in Ford Hall on Wednesday evening, October 14.

Announcements of this "festival" is just made by President George W. Adams and Secretary Martin J. Fleckbinger of the club, who issue an interesting prospectus forcasting the event.

The programme will include music, speaking, banquet and singing by the several company. Copies of popular songs will be distributed so that the banqueters may join in the choruses of the up-to-date selections as played by the orchestra.

The last time the R. A. Club got together for an evening's festivity was last May in the Brunswick, where a banquet was tendered some visiting officials of the Arcanum. At this banquet nearly 200 were present. Over double that number is expected for the Ford Hall gathering in honor of the Grand Regent.

TRIES TO DIE; SAYS SHE HAS SISTER HERE

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Vere Casey, formerly of Louisville, Ky., and now the wife of a New York broker, who is said to be out of the city, was found in a critical condition to-day with a vial which had contained bichloride of mercury in her hand. Mrs. Casey was in the home of a friend in a fashionable section of the city. She is a prisoner at a hospital on a charge of attempting suicide. Mrs. Casey said she had a sister in Boston.

SUFFRAGISTS' LEADER SPEAKS IN HUB TO-NIGHT

Mrs. Philip Snowden, the well-known London woman suffragist, will give an informal address to-night at No. 6 Marlboro street, Back Bay, on the efforts of English women to obtain the right to vote.

Mrs. Snowden is a very charming woman. She is one of the younger workers in the English suffrage movement, belonging to the conservative organization. In addition to speaking on the movement in England she will also give her impressions of the woman suffrage movement in this country as obtained from her recent travels.

To-night's meeting is under the auspices of the College Equal Suffrage League and the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government.

GUARD DUDLEY AT COURT TRIAL

Herbert S. Dudley, who was arrested Saturday night in a cab in which he was moving a quantity of goods the police declare stolen, was held in $1,000 bonds for the Grand Jury by Judge Sibley in the Dorchester District Court to-day, on a charge of breaking and entering the home of John L. Spaulding, of Ashmont, on May 4, and taking $100 worth of silverware and clothing.

Unusual precautions were used by the police in taking Dudley out to Dorchester court. Instead of being taken out by trolley or police carriage, he was locked into the Suffolk County prisoner's van and driven out that way. In court he was closely guarded by Deputy Sheriff Pierce, who stood by the dock during the hearing.

BABY DRINKS CARBOLIC ACID

Left unguarded for a few moments while his mother was shopping at a nearby store, little two-year-old George Lymon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Lyman of No. 1 State place, South Boston, to-day, climbed up on a kitchen shelf and drank the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid. When Mrs. Lyman came back the child was in convulsions and was hurriedly removed to the Carney Hospital. There it is said the burns will probably prove fatal.

MANAGER'S OFFICE
SHAKESPEAREAN CIRCUIT
COME RIGHT IN AND SIGN A CONTRACT FOR TEN YEARS
I JUST ADORE FRECKLES!
HONEST DEW YE?
CAN WE GET A GLASS OF WATER AND A PLATE OF CRACKERS FOR TWO BITS?

Say, honest, kid, it's laughin' stuff
The way some fillies work a bluff.
Their work is oily, sure enough.
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

Gee! local talent has no chance,
So I jest sit an' look askance,
An' watch them up-State dames advance.
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

Some dame blows in from Kenkakee
An' says "I'm great, b'gosh, I be."
Then us New Yorkers—23—
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

Her shape is like a Taylor trunk,
'Ceptin' where her chest is sunk;
An' wears her grandma's weddin' junk.
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

It's got me how our New York guys
Who hand it out that they're so wise,
Can fall fer them Oshkosh cow eyes.
By heck! gosh darn it, Mabel!

But still again, an' once again
Our boys fall for that hay an' grain,
An' hark to social news from Maine.
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

Why, Rector's floor is strewn with wheat.
Maud Muller sits in every seat.
Gee! I ain't never seen the beat.
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

So put away that blase gag.
An' listen with a cider jag.
The band plays "Oskaloosa Rag."
Ain't it awful, Mabel!

'Twixt Love and Money

The Spinster Lady Stops the Ruin of Three Lives

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DEAR SPINSTER LADY, I am sorry, "can you look me in the face and truthfully say that you do not love Charlie?"

The girl raised two defiant blue eyes that met the Spinster Lady's bravely for a moment and then wavered and fell, while the color deepened hotly over her face.

"I am answered," said the Spinster Lady quietly.

After a moment's pause she spoke again. "Anna," she said, "do you realize the wrong you are doing in marrying one man while you love another? Can't you see how distasteful the very touch of your husband's hand will be and how loathsome his caresses, and yet you must submit to them."

"Don't," shivered the girl.

"You must look at it from all sides, child. You will be rich and spend your husband's money, and all the while your heart will be with Charlie."

She Would Be Wealthy

"I have been poor all my life," said the girl, "and I have always vowed that I would marry a rich man. Now is my chance."

"But don't you see, Anna, that if you are longing for Charlie all the time the money won't bring you any happiness?"

"I could see him sometimes," said Anna in a low voice.

"Oh, Anna, Anna! has it come to that? Are you deliberately planning to ruin the lives of three people—your husband, Charlie and yourself?"

"What can I do? I have accepted Mr. M. I can't break it off."

"Yes you can. It is better to be looked upon as a flirt and refuse than to do a man the wrong of marrying him merely for his money. I won't go to go home and write Mr. M. That will be the end of Charlie and that you feel that you ought to tell him so."

"But if I marry Charlie we will be poor for years to come."

"Charlie is young and industrious and bound to succeed if he marries the right kind of a woman. You will be able to live modestly but comfortably if you love each other. I don't call that poverty, with a merry laugh.

Before leaving, the girl put both arms around the Spinster Lady's neck. "Dear," she whispered, "I am glad that you persuaded me to decide for love and Charlie. I think I wanted to be persuaded all the time."

Engaged to the Other

The girl drew back from the outstretched hands.

"I don't think you quite understand," she said slowly. "I am not engaged to Charlie, but to Mr. M."

"Mr. M.! Why, Anna, he is older than your father. You can't be in earnest."

"I was never more so in my life. I am going to marry Mr. M. in three months. I want money, and Mr. M. has plenty."

"Then Charlie has only love."

"What is the use of talking about Charlie? That is over and done with, and I tell you" (defiantly) "that I am going to marry Mr. M., no matter what any one says."

"You do not seem wildly happy, my dear, in spite of having the prospect of being a rich man's wife."

Wants to Forget Charlie

"Oh, I'm happy enough. It's just that people will keep reminding me of Charlie, and I want to forget him."

"Anna," said the Spinster Lady earnestly, "can you look me in the face and truthfully say that you do not love Charlie?"

The girl raised two defiant blue eyes that met the Spinster Lady's bravely for a moment and then wavered and fell, while the color deepened hotly over her face.

"I am answered," said the Spinster Lady quietly.

After a moment's pause she spoke again. "Anna," she said, "do you realize the wrong you are doing in marrying one man while you love another? Can't you see how distasteful the very touch of your husband's hand will be and how loathsome his caresses, and yet you must submit to them."

"Don't," shivered the girl.

"You must look at it from all sides, child. You will be rich and spend your husband's money, and all the while your heart will be with Charlie."

"Yes you can. It is better to be looked upon as a flirt and refuse than to do a man the wrong of marrying him merely for his money. I won't go to go home and write Mr. M. That will be the end of Charlie and that you feel that you ought to tell him so."

"But if I marry Charlie we will be poor for years to come."

"Charlie is young and industrious and bound to succeed if he marries the right kind of a woman. You will be able to live modestly but comfortably if you love each other. I don't call that poverty," with a merry laugh.

Before leaving, the girl put both arms around the Spinster Lady's neck. "Dear," she whispered, "I am glad that you persuaded me to decide for love and Charlie. I think I wanted to be persuaded all the time."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DID QUITE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

On Sunday afternoon I had quite a number of young men and girls at my house, the ages being from seventeen to nineteen years of age. After having some singing, one of the boys suggested kissing games. All of the young folks played except myself, as I thought it improper for a young lady to kiss a stranger. I had the wife introduced earlier in the afternoon; do you think I did right in refusing to play? My friends think that I have done wrong. What is your advice? I am not holding them in these games mode the young folks feel bad. Is it my duty to apologize to them?

H. L.

YOU were placed in a difficult position. Perhaps you were the hostess, but I think no one were right in refusing to play games of that sort. What you really should have done was say that you did not care had to have them play kissing games. Another time suggest something else and they will see that you do not approve.

A MATTER OF FRIENDSHIP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady twenty-two years of age, and have known a gentleman for about five years. At the time I met him, he had been married, but was expecting to receive a divorce, which was granted soon after. Whenever he was in the neighborhood, he usually used to call, but of late he has become quite a frequent visitor, and as I understand has become changed man, more settled down in his habits, etc. Would you advise me to receive his attention, as I believe they are purely friendly and have been for more?

READER.

AS long as you understand that his interest in you is purely friendly I see no reason why you should not receive his visits. But if you think that there is any danger of your growing to love him you had better discourage him very often, as it would only mean unhappiness for you in the future.

Tomorrow's Best Bargains

Money-Savers for Thrifty Shoppers Selected by an Expert

IN THE INFANTS' DEPARTMENT at Filene's Bargain Basement you will find an odd lot of beautifully made white coats, suitable for the baby from six months up to two years, that have just been greatly reduced, as they are slightly soiled. In the lot are several handsomely trimmed silk and voile imported coats that were formerly sold for prices up to $16, all marked to $4.98 each; also some little cashmere and cloth coats, silk lined throughout, and trimmed with fine laces and hand stitching, reduced from $7.50 to $2.98. These are exceptionally good bargains.

YOU WILL FIND SOME SPLENDID values in girls' coats tomorrow at James A. Houston's, when several dozen models that were formerly sold for $15.00 will be placed on sale in their basement bargain centre for $2.85, as a clearance price. These coats are made of smart flight mixtures in a nobby tailored style for girls from 6 to 14 years. There is also a fine, smart wool coat made of plain material in red, navy and brown, that is excellent value at the same price.

A RARE VALUE IN A nobby made black sateen petticoat may be had in the skirt department at Filene's tomorrow. Thirty-six skirts made of fine quality sateen, cut full, with a flounce made of two separate ruffles of fine tucks and clusters of ruffles, that would ordinarily sell for $1.50, will be placed on sale as a special in readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN for 98 cents each. These will be found unusually good looking skirts at this price.

JUST FOR WEDNESDAY AT Miss Connell's Tremont Temple store one of the prettiest buttoned back shirt waists will be offered at a special price to readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN. This waist is made of fine two with a three-pointed yoke effect of dark bamburg and lace it-section. It has a trimmed back, shaped collar and three-quarter length sleeves, with lace cuffs. It is a good selling model at $1.98, but for one day will be offered at $1.35. There are all sizes from 32 to 44 bust.

A SMALL LOT OF LADIES' GOWNS made in dainty cheniae style of fine cambric with deep yoke and short puff sleeves of white lace insertion, with a pink ribbon and finished with fine val. edging, will be found at Jordan Marsh's for quick sale, just reduced from $1.50. There are also a few of good quality muslin in nainsook and prettily trimmed with laces and hamburgs that were formerly sold for $1.75, all marked to the same price.

WEDNESDAY IN THE UNDERwear department at Gilchrist's several dozen ladies' chemise made of fine quality cotton in different styles, some trimmed with hamburg and others with narrow ruffle, will all be placed on sale for 39 cents each. This is a remarkable value as styles that have always sold for 49 cents and 50 cents, marked to this price to close them out. All sizes are on hand.

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO PURCHASE inexpensive material to make up some little waists for the coming spring, you will find a large assortment of wool finished cashmere at Timothy Smith's for 12½ cents a yard, that is just the thing, and really worth twice this amount. It may be had in checks and plaids of green, blue, brown and garnet effects, and is thirty-two inches wide.

AS A "SPECIAL" FOR WEDNESDAY Ferdinand's Blue Store, Roxbury, will offer a four-shelf magazine rack that usually sells for $1.25, for one day's selling at 59 cents each. These racks may be had in oak or mahogany finish. The oak stands forty-two inches high and the mahogany thirty-six inches. Both are strongly made with square posts and are really good bargains at this low price.

Why No Perfect Wives?

The Kind of Paradoxical Paragon a Man Wants

By DOROTHY DIX

HERE are a few of the things that an ordinary, every-day sort of a man expects of his wife:

She must be pretty and attractive, yet waste no time on thinking about her looks.

She must make her own clothes, and trim her own hats, yet appear as well dressed as women who patronize high-priced tailors and buy imported millinery.

She must keep a good table, yet run up no bills at the butcher's and grocer's.

She must be an ornament for the parlor, yet be the household drudge.

She must do the family cooking, yet never smell of the kitchen.

She must be able to do the washing and scrubbing and sewing, yet keep her nails manicured and her hands in a nice, squeezable condition.

Must Be Up to Date

She must keep up with all that goes on in the world, and be fresh, and bright, and witty, yet never stir away from her own fireside.

She must be intellectual, yet never have an opinion that differs from her husband's, such a fool as to go off and cry when he says brutal things to her, or makes cruel jokes at her expense.

She must simply dote on nursing her husband when he is sick, though she gets nothing but hard words and knocks for her pains.

She must bear all things meekly, put up with injustices, stand regardless and unmerited insult, yet be a strong and noble character.

Above all she must be willing to work like a slave, yet be blissfully grateful to the man who "supports" her.

It is strange that so few men find their ideal wife?

Mrs. Hammer on Feminine Fashions

Suffering Husband Rebels at Mehitable's New Hat and Learns a Lesson

By ARLETTA B. CANFIELD

WELL, Hammer composed an epic of a couple of meal bags for which I have no further use; that there would be about as much shape to them as there is to the other night on the whyfor-itiveness of the blossoming styles in women's dress.

He began by telling me that he didn't see why I didn't take the front door mat and make a new Fall chapeau out of it instead of spending all the money I did on a nightmare of a concoction stirred up by some wild-eyed higgledy-hatted milliner, the result of which was a cross between an enlarged haystack, with a turkey roost on it, and a hash omelet.

He announced that I could have used the feathers from cold rabbit McLeagrix, who has a date with the chopping block on Thanksgiving, and the effect would have been equally striking.

To tell the truth I don't care for the whizzy whackery kind of knocks the new millinery gives to the optics of the patient public, but I wouldn't die any sprightlier to Hammer. I just got the old monstrosity out and added another plume or two and let it go at that.

Turned Loose Hot Air

Then when he caught his breath and had his face cold back into sufficient space to hold it for a while, he turned loose the hot air hose all over my latest creation in the way of street costume. That is the skirt of it were too scant to suit his grumpship and the bodice bound as if it had been painted on me, so he said it.

And the chorus of his little ballad always wailed out the plaint that this year's styles are not what they were twelve months agone. He opined that no sooner did women get their skirts so full of gores and plaits and shirrs and frills and fancies the sweeps of harems, which she had to hire two small boys and a bull pup to keep in subjection, than she took the contract for mopping off the city streets with dragging that she couldn't pick up if she tried. He said.

"When you get your scabbard gown on and go wigwagging down the street, you don't want to call on me to help you over the doorstep—that is, coming in. I saw Miranda McGuire trying to keep track of her feet and find out which one of them was which on State street to-day, and I just thought right then that I ought to make the series for a while. There'll be something worth looking at on the streets if I did. If women used their brains in planning their clothes as mean do, they'd amount to something in this world. Now, men always have kept somewhere nearly the same style in clothes and it's easier to keep all the mush in the dough box to keep up with the statistics."

Mehitable Gets Busy

Now, by the time he had climbed up the side of the house and was ready to jump off the chimney in his insurrections, I thought it was about time for Mehitable to give him a shove and have the tragedy finished with ruffles.

I waited until he had got up the bars after the last bunch of sighters had left his brand receded into their hide and had been turned loose on the grass in my backyard, where they could do me the most good, and then I began to talk. I reminded me to round up a few ideas of my own and corral them right under the window of Hammer's conservatory of music, so that I might slightly cheer him up with his, so I said:

"Hammer, do you remember when you had your trousers cut a la mousquetaire? When you came courting me don't you remember how you couldn't sit down at the piano, and how you didn't dare to work your wings in swinging me because you didn't have any signed contract with your clothes to stay saved?

His Ruffled Costume

"Yes? And then remember how, the very next year, when all the male people, tired had in rebellion struck for the right to wear dresses and skirts, compromised by having your costume ruffled on to the waistband? Well, no, not exactly ruffled on; just persuaded to move along a little on the bench?"

I just told him that I didn't see why he couldn't improvise some new creasers out of a couple of meal bags for which I have no further use; that there would be about as much shape to them as there is to the other night on the whyfor-itiveness of the blossoming styles in women's dress. What difference should it make to him whether the bottom of his coat trailed down in front or felt back in ripples or just stopped along the line level?

It was foolish and flippant and dudified, one to be so particular, and that if I had the making of men's styles I'd have things hopping along the streets that looked like something bobbed around doughnuts. He was getting late for his scrawl but, anyway, so I could give him an object lesson with it, and I just took it off his head, carried it out and fed it to the calf. I told him that I didn't propose for it to be possible for me to have to undergo the humiliation of another season of such a little turnupship, ruffled, nuffled, puffled hat, looking like a cross with a mauve green band, grinning at me.

Hammer Begins to Shrink

By the time I got through showing him the plaids on his sashes and the buckles on his instep, in addition to the nobby arrangement that flew from his collar button, he began to shrink, and by the time I got through with my oratorio he looked like the little E string, about the smallest thing in the orchestra.

He won't compose any more poems about my ankles I'll bet a sour apple, and, as you know, he actually wants me to be the architect of his costumes as a regular pastime.

COCOA BUTTER FOR HOLLOWS

C. H.

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me how to make cocoa butter? I am very hollow around the neck, and would like to fill it out; also please tell me how to use it to get the best results. I want something that will not irritate the skin, for I am a sufferer from eczema.

YOU buy cocoa butter in the drug stores; it is not made by any home process. Just massage the neck well with it after having bathed it in hot water to open the pores. After the skin has absorbed all that it will of the butter wipe off and dash with cold water into which you have put a few drops of benzoin. This helps to harden the skin and flesh, making it firm instead of flabby. Avoid the use of more water than is absolutely necessary, cleansing the neck and face with a cleansing cream. Better use the cocoa butter without the use of water if this irritates the skin.

ORRIS ROOT CLEANS HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please tell me how to use orris root to clean and take the oil out of my hair? I have to wash it every week. Do you think that is what made my hair so short and thin?

ANXIOUS.

YOU can use the orris root alone or in combination with cornmeal, a tablespoonful or two to a cup of meal. Simply open up the hair and sift the powder well on to the scalp; then with a good brush remove it. Be sure that you have reached all over the head with the powder and that you get it all out again by long strokes of the brush. This will remove all the oil and dirt along with the powder and is as good as a wet shampoo for cleaning the hair, keeping it dry and harsh and not allowing it to grow long.

Are Seven Out of Eight Married Couples Unhappy?

WHETHER a married couple will be happy or unhappy after the honeymoon days are over depends, among many things, chiefly on themselves. Sometimes the wife is to blame for their unhappiness, sometimes the husband, sometimes both.

Dorothy Dix has said that she does not believe Dr. Mitchell was right when he said "Seven out of eight married couples are unhappy."

Are seven out of eight married couples unhappy? And if so, why?

Here are some of the answers already received:

BLAMES MOTHERS-IN-LAW

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

If young couples when they get married went right to housekeeping instead of living with their mothers-in-law, there would be more than seven out of eight couples happy. There are very few couples that live with their mothers-in-law. Every married couple is sure to have some kind of a spat, and then the mothers-in-law interfere and that causes an exaggeration of the quarrel.

C. B.

HAPPY ON $15 A WEEK

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

No, seven out of eight married couples are not unhappy. I was married when I was seventeen and my husband twenty-one. I am now twenty-three and the mother of two children, and happy as a lark. My husband earns $15 a week. But girls, in the first place, when you marry, learn how happy her husband's taste, yet have pleasure enough about her always to keep him interested.

She must be frantically in love with him, yet never bore him with her devotion.

She must think of her husband first, last and all the time, yet always appear glad that a busy man has many things to think about before his wife.

She must be ready to entertain him of an evening, but she must not expect her husband to be anything more than grunt in answer to her remarks.

She must not belong to clubs that take a woman out of her home, nor object if her husband belonging to clubs that do.

She must never look at another man herself, but she must not be silly enough to get jealous when her husband chases after every petticoat that comes along.

Must Be Ready for All

She must not expect to have her husband forgive her if he steps a mile astepping, but she must be ready to forgive him when he tumbles down the whole embankment.

She must be a leader in the W. C. T. U. herself, yet ready to get up cheerfully and open the door for a man who can't walk the keyhole at 5 a. m.

She must tread on eggs as regards her husband's sensitive feelings, but not be such a fool as to go off and cry when he says brutal things to her, or makes cruel jokes at her expense.

She must simply dote on nursing her husband when he is sick, though she gets nothing but hard words and knocks for her pains.

She must bear all things meekly, put up with injustices, stand regardless and unmerited insult, yet be a strong and noble character.

Above all she must be willing to work like a slave, yet be blissfully grateful to the man who "supports" her.

It is strange that so few men find their ideal wife?

FIVE OUT OF EIGHT

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I should judge about five out of eight married couples are unhappy. As for my own case, I have been married seven years, and have no children, so one could be happier. If husband and wife pull together and each do their own part toward running the home, happiness can be had. It seems to be the couples that have children that are not happy.

CHANLER GETS AN EARLY LEAD IN NEW YORK

Lieut.-Gov. Appears to Hold Reins Over Democratic State Convention.

HARMONY PREDICTED

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 15.—While the Democratic gubernatorial situation is still enveloped in a doubtful haze, popular sentiment among most of the delegates inclines to the candidacy of Lieutenant-Governor Chanler. Yet there is a possibility of some dark horse winning the race.

Mr. Chanler has developed the real strength so far, and after the temporary organization of the convention the situation may be cleared entirely in his favor.

Indications at this time unquestionably point to a harmonious convention, because it is the express purpose of State Chairman Cunneen to see that all regularly elected delegates are seated despite any clamor of factions.

There is every indication to believe from advance information that the Kelvert delegates will be recognized. The Brooklynite secured his nomination, in which he says he will bolt the convention in the event of one of his delegates being unseated.

As yet it is impossible to ascertain what position Leader Murphy of Tammany Hall will assume.

One thing is absolutely certain. Chairman Cunneen is doing his utmost to bring about a condition of harmony so that the Democracy of New York State may go before the people united and with a determined stand to win this election.

TO OPEN SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

The Boston Y. M. C. A.'s School of Commerce and Finance will open for the 1908-9 season Monday evening, September 28. It will have an enlarged programme of evening studies, designed to make the school one of "practical business for business men."

The work will be under the supervision of Frank P. Speare as educational director. The courses will be in direct charge of Orlando C. Moyer of Simmons College, dean of the school, and instructor in finance and accountancy. The school has a faculty of twenty-eight members, and also has the benefit of an advisory board consisting of prominent Boston merchants, bankers and other business men.

The courses include accountancy, investment brokerage, corporation reporting, advertising, insurance, real estate and secretarial work, salesmanship, business law, languages and other studies pertaining to business training.

SEEING CHICAGO; ROBBED BY THUGS

"The American Idea" Hits the Speed Limit in the Line of Musical Shows

"The American Idea" will furnish lots of fun for Boston if they don't pinch the show for overspeeding, the pace is so fast and furious.

It's a regular George M. Cohan show, no doubt about it. Here are a few Cohanisms from the book:

Trixie Friganza to Al Reeves: "If you think that you've got a large balance left in your guess account."

Reeves, speaking of Trixie: "Say, she was so nutty over me that she used to write love letters to herself and sign my name to 'em."

Reeves to Trixie (his divorced wife): "And where has your second husband gone?"

Trixie: "I don't care to use such language," (the gentleman in question being thought dead).

Trixie, sentimentally, to Reeves: "And have you nothing to say, nothing to say to me after six long years?"

Reeves, earnestly: "Great Scott, but you did get fat."

It "Goes Some."

The "American Idea," as shown in the play, seems to be for rich Americans to get fooled by a fake French Count and try to wed their daughters to him, in which Al Reeves, as Stephen Hustleford, eggs the deluded father on. Gregory and Walter LeRoy, rich brewer and grocer from Brooklyn, N. Y., are the fathers and Hustleford works them going and coming, or as Gregory, the brewer, says, gives them the "reverse English both ways."

Around this for a plot Cohan has strung a galaxy of song, beauty and dancing. The girl part of the chorus is costumed regardless of expense and Cohan looks to back up the clothes.

For special dancing there is nothing livelier on two feet than Rosie Green and Bertie Vanderbilt, who get a hand the minute they flash out in the opening ensemble. It's a regular Cohan trick to get the chorus going good, hit up the pace and bring on the eight "pony" girls, and then come down the dancing stretch for a rattling finish by shooting in the Green and Vanderbilt pair for the whirlwind end.

At the end of the second act, with the chorus all in red, white and blue, the audience kept the curtain traveling eight or ten times.

Of the songs, the most truly musical is "The Garden That Blooms for You," by Richard Tobin and chorus. Tobin is in the cast for this song alone.

Trixie Frigansa and George Beban, the fake Count, have a funeful bit, which will be whistled along the streets, in "Cohan's Pet Names," which drills about after this style:

Something to Whistle.

"Don't call me Honey, Love, for that rhymes with money, Love," and then: "Don't call me Daisy, Love, for that rhymes with weary, Love," and again: "Don't call me Dulsy, Love, for that rhymes with lazy, Love," and so on.

Walter LeRoy takes a bit also with "Sullivan," something after the fashion of "Harrigan," and Al Reeves, with his old time, easy way, gets 'em with "Down in Dear Old Longacre Square."

Trixie Frigansa, plump and pretty, has a couple of those song-and-story combinations in "They Always Follow Me" and "Mother's Day Off."

The "Mysterious Man" and the "Mysterious Girl" are the final Cohan touch. The Mysterious Man (Hugh Chilvers) is mysterious, like the ancient Greek chorus, only more so. At this point a mysterious stranger walked into the lobby, gazed suspiciously at a group of American men, then slowly turned on his heel and walked away.—(Exit).

When he has sprung things like this a few times, apropos of nothing at all in particular, the mere entrance of the "Mysterious Man" is greeted before he utters a word.

Ezra Kendall Returns.

Ezra Kendall came back to Boston yesterday, making his appearance at Keith's Theatre, and making the matinee audience house resound with laughter. He gave characteristic entertainment, and was seen at his best. Another star feature of the bill was "The Love Waltz," which has been described as "a story with music" in vaudeville. This operetta is given by a talented company of twenty-five and is splendidly staged. Another special attraction was Donald Sinclair Scott's violin artist, who has brilliant technique and a fine to his touch which delights his audience. Other features were Selma Braatz, the female juggler; Mullen and Coogan, comic acrobats; J. Warren Keane; Brown and Hodges and the special Keith show of moving pictures, songs and local features.

Last Week of Bernard.

Sam Bernard and his sterling company of supporters will appear at the Majestic Theatre last evening for the opening performance of the final week of the engagement at this popular playhouse and "Nearly a Hero" made a big audience laugh as few musical comedies seen in this city of late have succeeded in doing. The piece is one of the funniest of its kind ever written and has afforded the star and Grace LaRue, Ada Lewis, Neva Aymer, Daisy Leon, Sam Ettenger and others opportunities the best of chances to prove themselves in the front rank of entertainers.

"Prince Humbug" Soon Goes.

Frank Lalor in "Prince Humbug" continued last evening in the Park Theatre to the delight of a comedy star. He has big hit as a prominent member of the company he is the high standard set by the leader, and Marion Garson, Florence Morrison, Jeannette Bergard, Will H. Noon, Arthur Donaldson and "Jack" Clark have each and all scored heavily in their respective roles. There are many song hits in the piece, which is finely mounted and sung. The chorus is very attractive. The bill at the Park next week will be Marie Doro in "The Richest Girl."

Every One Likes "The Widow"

"The Merry Widow" is making a hit at the Tremont Theatre which has never been surpassed anywhere by the remarkable Viennese operetta with its wonderful waltz, interesting story and high class music all through. In the mere Bostonians there are who see it the more its best features. In fact the chief criticism heard receiving from the public is the strongest encomium which could come from any source. Donald Brian as the "Prince Danilo" and Lina Abarbanell as the "Merry Widow," and the whole company in fact, have made good. Henry W. Savage's people to give Boston a production of the famous operetta which should rank with the best.

TRIXIE FRIGANZA.

This miss has things humming in "The American Idea" at the Hollis.

"Uncle Josh" Wins Friends.

Denman Thompson in the "Old Homestead" continued to be the bill at the Boston Theatre last evening, and the curtain went up on a large audience, and one of the most captivating of American plays. The great theatre showed that the play has more than held its own with those who have seen it in the past, and that it has made new friends with the younger of the present generation of playgoers. Mr. Thompson plays Uncle Joshua Whitcomb better than ever. The part seems ever to be in his hands, and the character of the old New Hampshire farmer is so simply played that it seems nature itself behind the footlights. "The Old Homestead" has never been given a better production than the present one. The size of the audiences testify to its merits. The performances at the Boston Theatre will be the only ones given in New England.

The College Girl Play.

"Commencement Days" opened another week of its successful engagement at the Colonial theatre last evening, and it seems as if, the good wine, it improves with age. The longer it is played the more the excellent company intrusted with its production seems able to bring out its fine points and exquisite sentiment. It is establishing itself in the public mind as the college girl play par excellence. It is quite un...e any other and John Cort has selected for its production a company which is remarkably adapted individually and collectively for the task.

Tuneful "Bandanna Land."

Williams and Walker drew to the Orpheum another of the big audiences which have made their present engagement at this theatre so notable. In "Bandanna Land" they have a musical comedy which affords both ample chances to show why they have become such favorites, a fine piece in tuneful, and the singers are natural vocalists. They produce quickly the loss of richness seemingly peculiar to the Ethiopian throat. John Gretton Walker's dance of Salome is exceedingly artistic. She is one of the most graceful dancers of her sex.

Craig Scores in "The Devil."

John Craig and his stock company repeated at the Castle Square Theatre last evening the performance of "The Devil," which has ended a week's run in that theatrical world. The company is adding finish to its work in this play the longer it holds the stage and the production is gaining in artistic quality with every performance. It is one of the best things Mr. Craig and his associate players have done and emphasizes the fact that the organization is one of the most competent stock companies ever in Boston in...e. The public has shown great interest in the play. It is so unusual in theme and development that it presents more of the...ment than is often seen in these days. Next week the play at this house will be "Throne of Ea..."

One More "Salome" Dance.

Morning, Noon and Night" was such an attraction at the Globe Theatre last evening there was no room left in the house for anything save laughter. This show with Joe Welch, Artie Hall and others in the cast is a big one. It is full of fun as a count is to engine and is given by a company capably led by Manager Mortimer M. Thiess from the best in the business. Besides the headliners named there are Senorita Rosenita Mantilla and Sheean and Warren in the cast, and they are all backed by a company of fifty good ones. The "Dance of Salome" is worth seeing. So is everything else in the bill. Next Monday's customs Orin H. Thayer will take the stage in "A Square Deal."

Lottie Awakens the Echoes.

The applause which greeted Lottie Williams as "Tennessee True Queen of the Moonshiners," awoke the echoes of the Grand Opera House last evening and it takes a big and enthusiastic audience to do that. This is a Rose Melville "worth seeing." So is everything else in the bill. A new Monday's customs Orin H. Thayer will take the stage in "A Square Deal."

"Sapho" on Stage Again.

"Sapho" is a play that will always draw, for it is a fine stage presentation of one of the most powerful French novels ever penned. As given at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday by the stock company, it was as potent an attraction as ever. The famous stairway scene, where the hero carries "Sapho" upward in his arms, was given most impressively. There was nothing left out of the production which has tended to make it famous with the public. Hal Clarendon played the part of the hero and Charlotte Harris was seen to advantage in the title role. Next week the play will be "Resurrection."

"Frolicsome Lambs."

"The Frolicsome Lambs" disported themselves on the stage of the Howard yesterday and the gambols of the gay lambs of dalliance pleased the audience, which was big and appreciative. "The Lambs" are thoroughly up-to-date burlesquers, and Miss May Strehl, the dashing leader, is a fair vaudeville gallery.

With "The Avenue Girls."

"The Avenue Girls" made things hum at the Columbia Theatre when they took possession of the stage of that playhouse yesterday. They are a band of burlesque stars who deserve success to bring along with them are some good comedians. The show was also the real goods in the company are Grace Delmore, Julia Nantes, Helen Jessie Moore and Lulu Chapman. The burlesque is "The Avenue Girls" are entitled "The Maid of the Alps." "Hypnotized in Hayseed in Spain." Both are very funny with such comedians as Leo Stevens, Billy Arlington, Alex Wigtman, and Walter Pearson around. On Wednesday there will be a matinee, and the amateurs appear on Friday.

In the "Beauty Show."

At Keeney's "Beauty Show" was the piece de resistance at the Palace Theatre yesterday, and the company is replete with loveliness of the feminine variety and can put on a good dance to a pitch fearful little to be desired. The proprietor searched the beauty mart, it is said, for the most pulchritudinous, but the big bunch of good looking girls he engaged in his theatre are all good stage entertainers as well. There are some clever fun-making people in the attaches of the show, and the olio performers are strong cards.

Fine Picture Shows.

Strong bills were presented at the Hub Theatre, the Star Theatre and the Scenic Temple yesterday. Good music and the best in the way of moving pictures were features.

Austin & Stone's Museum presented a good stage performance and some striking novelties in the curio hall.

Down the Bay.

The steamer King Philip continues to make pleasant autumn-day trips to the fishing ground, and prizes are awaged to the heaviest catches.

The steamer Sutcliffe is one of the best and safest fishing boats, and passengers are well cared for.

A trip to Provincetown on the steamer Cape Cod is a little ocean voyage worth while.

Wonderland closes next Sunday. Also in Wonderland is one of the most novel and picturesque entertainments ever offered to the public. Here is a show that will be remembered as something entirely out of the ordinary. Other attractions remaining there are Pawnee Bill, Miss Kellerman, the chutes and rides.

This is carnival time at Revere Beach, and the people of all the year when visitor should be sure to get down to the pleasure resort of the multitude. There are many things worth seeing there now during the closing days of the season, besides new added attractions as the "Slide for Life," water tilting and fireworks.

HOUSTON SALE ATTRACTS BIG CROWD TO-DAY

Ready-to-Wear Gowns and Millinery Two of Many Good Features.

RECORD OFFER BY FIRM

The James A. Houston Company's Fall opening is marked by several interesting features, but one in which the management takes great pride and which has been favorably commented upon by the enterprising firm's many patrons, is the exhibition of ready-to-wear gowns and garments, the most complete the firm has ever shown. The latest creations in feminine apparel for all ages, from baby to grandmama, are shown in a wide variety of styles and fabrics.

There has been a marked change in styles since last fall, and nothing more radical than has been known in any similar period of time for a generation or more. The Houston Company has a most complete variety of Directoire garments, from the extreme French designs to the modified adaptations of the American designers. The high waisted gowns and coats with lapels and braiding are true examples of the latest fancy from the brilliant Parisian beauties who hovered about the military staff who had charge of his dethronement and the beginning of his reign as Emperor.

In millinery the American designers seem to have the best of it, and in the production of big semi-barbaric effects than the French. The exclusive "pill box" hat, of which so much has been heard and so little seen of late, has no place in the array. Small hats are the mode designed which are in keeping with the close fitting coat. The use of the fancy effects buried amid the gorgeous plumage of tropical birds.

Flowers which were so much in evidence last Winter have given place almost entirely to plumage, and the more splendidly barbaric the plumage the more effective it is. The Houston store is crowded with shoppers to-day, as it was yesterday, and the enthusiastic received from the firm's patrons, no less than the liberal buying, are very gratifying to the managers and salespeople of the company.

That championship diamond race this year will drive the fans daffy before it is over by the present way the teams are upsetting each other, and as the end of the schedule draws near there seems to be a worse bonehing than ever.

Yesterday, for instance, the American League race was tangled up more by the Tigers getting another hard swat from the St. Louis Browns, who will turn their hoodoo at them as long as there is a chance of landing the Tigers off.

WHITE SOX LOSE, TOO.

Then to complicate matters the White Sox, who had been making great strides to overhaul the Tigers, got theirs from the Cleveland crowd, and it was a case of the third and fourth teams beating the first and second place holders which brough them up from the rear with a rush, and a repetition of the same tactics will cause the barking contenders of the Tigers to have a bit of chills and fever.

The most interest to local fans was the gaining of fifth place by the Red Sox, who walked right into the spot natural as would be through the kindness of the Washington team, who made an even split with the Athletics, which pulled down their percentage just sufficient to allow the Hub clue to take possession.

That they will continue to hold it is almost certain, and should the final bell rings they should be pretty close on the heels of the contenders for pennant.

The Red Sox must win again to-day if the Athletics manage to beat the Senators or slide back into their former sixth place.

GIANTS INCREASE LEAD.

As Pittsburg and Chicago Cubs did not play yesterday and the Giants won from Brooklyn, the Eastern team's position at the head of the National League was made all the stronger.

To-day the battle between the East and the West begins in earnest, with Chicago at Boston, St. Louis in New York, Pittsburg at Philadelphia and Cincinnati at Brooklyn.

The Western teams in the American League will have it out once more before the four coast teams start their invasion to do some killing as the pennant contingent will be about ripe for a slaughtering after playing themselves out.

HUB PRINTERS WON EASILY

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—In the opening games of the National Baseball League of Union Printers the aggregation from Boston measured up its Philadelphia opponents in the first inning, and when Umpire Marshall called the game by agreement at the end of the seventh inning the Bostons had rolled up a total of 28 runs, while the Quakers were unable to score and secured only one safe hit.

Pittsburg defeated Cincinnati, 13 to 8.

BOOKMAKER MORRIS SCORED IN NOT PAYING DERBY BETS

There was much surprise among Boston horsemen when it became known that the Western promoters of a Winter book on the result of the American Trotting Derby, recently decided at Readville, did not pay off the numerous claims made upon the tickets on Allen Winter and the other horses having places in the race at the different odds quoted.

In doing this they have sent broadcast the following letter:

"Dear Sir: Owing to the general dissatisfaction on the result of the American Trotting Derby, as evidenced by the numerous demands made upon us for the refunds of the money placed by persons who bought pools on the race, we have decided not to pay any pool tickets on Allen Winter, Grattan Boy or any horse that finished behind him in the race. This decision is arrived at after due consideration with the best racing authorities on the turf. The opinion of the many of those persons with whom I advised being as follows, viz.: 'The race was rotten as anyone could be for the association, and as I had advertised in my flash of the Derby that I would refund the money in case of dissatisfaction, and the money turned in on Allen Winter is not but one dash of 1¼ miles and not on the whole is the race one much better.'

"As this seems the only course I can pursue, in order to satisfy my many customers, I shall refund all the money placed on receipt of the tickets. Yours truly,

"Cleveland, O., 301 Sinet-Bell Block."

Horse Review Editorial.

The Horse Review, a prominent publication devoted to the harness horse and circulated from Chicago, has the following editorial concerning the action of Morris, which will prove interesting to local horsemen in showing how the West looks upon his action:

"For cold audacity and a total disregard of all rules, both of racing and betting, this latest piece of work by one of only a bookmaker would be incapable, and it would be incredible of any bookmaker who cared anything for his reputation as such—although that asset, it must be confessed, is a somewhat doubtful one. Still there has always been held to believe such a thing as honor, according to their code, even among bookmakers.

"If more horses should appear for the race than can safely or fairness to all competitors be started, the association will divide them into divisions or fields, and in such case it is the usual custom for a right to start for the purse, the first eight to finish in each division earning that right; all horses racing in both preliminary and final races for the same purse, and the money in it as a part of the agreement that one starter in each division shall be sole judges of the condition of the track when ordered to the post, which is deemed necessary they may be contested on Monday, August 24.

"The above is a word-for-word reprint of the conditions governing the pacing part of the event, and they contradict flatly the welcheling of Morris in every particular. Except for his assumption live in the last paragraph, reading 'in case of preliminaries, if necessary, may be contested on Monday,' there would have been no preliminaries to be contested on Monday, but the race was the final. However, the Monday condition was merely a matter of detail if there would have been no preliminaries, and if instead it read 'may be contested on Monday,' it would be optional with the association to race them on Monday or not, as they saw fit.

Morris Stood to Lose.

"The remaining contentions set forth in the welcher's announcement are equally preposterous; and the true reason for his action may be unfortunately assigned to the fact that he stood to lose so much on the winner—as high as $15,000. We are credibly informed, to say better alone, whose investment was but $125—that he decided not to pay, but to welch.

"On many occasions in the past we have had reason to prognosticate the bookmaker and the look-betting system detrimental to racing; they have done more to corrupt and ruin it, and bring it into disrepute, than all other things combined.

"Bookmaking, by dominating the running turf, has obscured it utterly and brought it into the last ditch. Upon the barness turf it has never succeeded in gaining the strangle hold, but so far as it has fastened itself thereon has been productive of nothing but mischief.

"If the two largest trotting associations are wise they will, at their next congresses, pass laws prohibiting their members from allowing it et sanctum held under their auspices. The American Trotting Derby was modeled upon similar European events, and a step further in the same direction should be taken. All betting on European harness racing is done on the Paris mutual system, which is the only absolutely fair one in existence and is so recognized by everyone—except the bookmakers. And that also be made the ruling one here.

"In conclusion we would say that the 'general dissatisfaction' with the result of the Derby, in which the welcher so feelingly alludes, existed nowhere but in his own mind, and that he is only to should and, we trust will put him 'down and out' as far as any further operations on harness events are concerned."

BIG DOG SHOW ON TO-MORROW

What promises to be one of the best dog shows ever held in this vicinity will take place to-morrow at the Middlesex County fair grounds, South Framingham. It will be a one-day show under the auspices of the Framingham District Kennel Club. The entries number 573, of which 115 are Boston terriers. All belmont will be the all around judge. Tom Benson will hand out the ribbons to the Bostons, Fred Hoyer of Springfield will judge the French bulls, while Miss Alice Whitney will pass upon the merits of the big dogs.

The prizes are numerous and costly and make a fine display in Rice's window at South Framingham.

M'ALEER SAYS 'UMPS ARE O.K.

"The American League will be fortunate, indeed, if it can get four more umpires as good as Sheridan, Hurst, Evans, Egan, O'Loughlin and Connally for its 1909 staff," said Manager McAleer of the Browns.

"I have had all these men occasionally, but as a whole I am ashamed of the others, for they are all mighty conscientious and have shown intelligent umpires.

"Sheridan I regard as the greatest and grandest umpire the game has ever known."

WRESTLERS IN TRIM.

Profkos and Jack Williams are in great trim for their wrestling bout at the Columbia Theatre to-morrow evening, the Greek being the favorite with the local fans. Williams is the man Pardello claims can make minee meat of the Greek, and he is anxious to defeat Profkos on account of the standing it will give him in his coming tour of the West.

STOCK CAR RACES WILL OPEN NEW MOTOR PARKWAY

By J. C. KERRISON.

The decision of the Vanderbilt Commission to open the Long Island Parkway with a series of stock car races rather takes the wind out of the sails of the small car races scheduled for Savannah, the offering of cash prizes to the drivers means that the operators themselves will make a strong effort to get cars to drive in some one of the several contests, and the result will be a series of events such as has never been seen in this country. And speaking about the Vanderbilt cup to mind the fact that in all likelihood Charles Basle will drive the big Knox in the race this afternoon of America. The entries for the Vanderbilt number about half a dozen, and there is every opportunity of seeing the rotary as well as locating the bad spots in the roadways, which might cause disaster to their sires and emulators. The entries for the contest close within a few days, and it is almost certain that some thing like twenty-five cars will be on hand to start the tour on the evening of September 23.

* * *

At a recent luncheon of the Hot Engine Club, in New York, the following toast was proposed: "The people of Savannah, Ga., and the good people of Lowell, Mass., are both to them and hope they will get all that is coming. Mr. Morrell has presented the good people of Savannah a race this year and he has presented the same race to the good people of Lowell for next year. Drink to the good people of Savannah, nearly."

It was indicated by the stripping off of many tires in the Lowell road race that the tires were a poor fit on the rims, either the Briancliff or the last Vanderbilt. Tire troubles seemed to be the chief reason why there was such a gap between the winning car, which had a marvelous run luck, and the next few to finish, although the speed at full speed with one tire wholly deflated. He had full confidence that the tire would seem to be found in the experience of the Knox cars, which were fitted with Fisk removable rims and bolted-on tires. That the bolted-on type is the one secure sort that won't rip off was shown when Basle, driving the big Knox, rounded the hairpin turn at full speed with one tire wholly deflated. He had full confidence that the tire would not pull off, and it didn't. A couple of punctures sustained caused only a few minutes' delay, owing to the use of the removable rims.

FERGUSON FIT FOR BATTLE

Sandy Ferguson will be a dead one or in the front ranks of the heavyweights after to-night's battle with Joe Jeanette, the big colored boxer, at the Armory A. A. As Sandy wants to shine once more in the roped arena he has put in special preparation to lick Jeanette, and there are many who wish him luck.

Ferguson has the punch to do damage, and if he lands it once on Mr. Jeanette there is likely to be trouble. But Jeanette is tough and can stand a lot of punishing, yet has not often tasted the kind of pile-driving swings Sandy carries in his kit.

There will be no lack of encouragement from the members for Sandy to beat his opponent, wasom New Yorkers have been trying to match against Tommy Burns, for the title, and Sandy has a good chance to jump right into the limelight of the pugilistic firmament by connecting with the colored giant at short notice.

There is almost as much interest in the eight-round contest between Eddie Murphy of South Boston and Harry Scroggs of Baltimore as there is in the main bout. This will be the final test for Murphy before he goes after men like Donohue, Quill and the rest, who have been regarded as local leaders.

The opening bout, starting at 8:15 p. m. prompt will also be for eight rounds, between Jack Kliven, the Irish whirlwind, and Billy Rolfe, the South Boston ex-amateur champion.

KYGER STILL ACTIVE.

The veteran horseman, Hugh Kyger, of Kit Curry, 2:18½, fame, owns a large breeding establishment close to Darrstown, O., where he is spending his old days in comfort and plenty. Mr. Kyger has a record reached the four-score mark of man's life and is still active and able to drive a little.

SPEEDWAY NEXT YEAR AT PROVIDENCE
PROVIDENCE, Sept. 14.—Early in 1909 this city had a driving association of upward of 1,000 members which fought hard for a speedway at Roger Williams Park. It failed and passed out of active existence. It was succeeded by a "driving club" of less than 100 membership, and that also was short-lived. Last Fall the Jonathan Club was incorporated by a group of horsemen, the speedway matter was pushed, and to-day horsemen are awaiting only the completion of the contractor's job, which is timed for next Spring.

BIRMINGHAM WELCOMES NEW PARTY LEADERS

Hisgen, Graves and Hearst Get Record Demonstration in Alabama's Biggest City.

HEARST TALKS OF BRYAN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 15.—In the biggest city in Alabama and before the largest and most enthusiastic audience ever gathered at a political meeting in this district—the industrial section of the South—the Independence party launched a notable campaign last night.

The meeting was held in the Hippodrome, the largest assembly place in the city, and it was filled to capacity, many ladies being present.

On the stage sat many men well known in labor circles and well-known Republican leaders, while a large number of Democrats of prominence were in the audience.

When Thomas L. Hisgen, John Temple Graves, William R. Hearst, Clarence J. Shearn and others of the party leaders arrived the Hippodrome there was a rousing welcoming demonstration.

Mr. Hearst "Among Friends."

"The Independence party is certainly proud of its opening meeting," said Dr. L. A. Favrot, who called the meeting to order.

William Randolph Hearst was first introduced, and there was several minutes of cheering. He said he was glad to be among friends, and always been a Democrat, a Southern Democrat, a Virginia, Virginia, Missouri Democrat, and California, too. He told of the convention he gave to Mr. Bryan in 1896. He said he did not believe in free silver. He told how he had made a fight for Bryan.

"We did a good, clean fight," he said. "The curses of the Wall street men came, too. Down came the abuse that had been worked up in the newspaper business. Business support was withdrawn, but I needed room to fight for Mr. Bryan. It is to of the deficit in the returns in the newspaper office. The effort did not crack, and said he and his friends, but I personally. He was fighting for what he thought the public good.

"Four years later," he said, "the prepared for more fight, and again the fight was fought that must be fought for the Democracy of Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden.

"Four years later Mr. Bryan hauled down his mast and went to the support of Mr. Parker.

"Do you doubt it?" said Mr. Hearst. "Then look at Mr. Bryan's speech after the nomination of Mr. Parker.

"The Independence party," said Mr. Hearst, "was not conceived to destroy Mr. Bryan's was formed to destroy Democratic government, true Republican government and true American government was formed for the whole people. The first step was taken when Thomas Jefferson wrote his famous paper and the last step now now being taken.

"I am in the Independence party because I find in the true Democratic party. It is not a selfish party.

"Mr. Bryan says I am trying to elect Mr. Taft, and that is not true. I am trying my best to elect Thomas L. Hisgen and John Temple Graves.

Mr. Bryan said I was angry with him. because I would not support him. That is not true.

"I'm against both parties," he concluded, "that the Independence party was formed, and it will support the best man."

Thomas L. Hisgen was next introduced. His story of the deficit in the returns in the Standard Oil Company was full of witty sayings which elicited laughter and frequent applause, and when Mr. Hisgen held up the first bill of the new currency displayed in the silence of the immense audience.

"If elected to the high office of President," he said, "I will do all in my power to put the high-class criminals in the jail where they belong." This also met with cheering.

Din of Cheers for Graves.

When John Temple Graves, the man nominated to represent the South, was introduced by Mr. Hisgen, who used this way to formally make his speech, there was a prolonged cheering. Mr. Graves spoke of his self-imposed task he always calls his own land. He paid a splendid tribute to the South. He referred to the speeches of Mr. Hearst and Mr. Hisgen.

Colonel Graves was at his best when he recalled the galling treatment received by Lieutenant Richard Brenham Pegram, the Democratic National Convention. Striking a sympathetic chord in the hearts of the hearers, he denounced those responsible for the humiliation of the gallant hero.

"This brave, chivalrous character, this beloved son of the South and of the nation," said the speaker, "was insulted through the lips of the chairman and the threats of the delegates when he made his masterly plea for the recognition of the necessity of a third party.

"This man had proven his patriotism and established his bravery in actual war by undertaking a daring deed that many thought meant certain death, and he raised a thousand miles only to be treated in a barbarous manner by men who should have heard and heeded his cry if they had had the interests of humanity at heart."

LABOR AND CAPITAL IN A BIG COMBINE

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—The most remarkable combination between capital and labor ever conceived was launched to-day by the representatives of four railroad employes' brotherhoods and the leading capitalists and investors of Western railroad companies. It will be known as the American Railroad Employes and Investors Association, and the investors in all railroads in North America will be invited to join.

The officials of the four brotherhoods who were present represent 400,000 organized men. There were P. H. Morrissey, grand master of Railroad Firemen; Frederick Warren S. Stone, grand chief Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; A. R. Garretson, president Order of Railroad Conductors, and Grand J. Hanrahan, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

The main object of the association is by all lawful means to cultivate and maintain between its members and the public a mutual interest and such concern on the part of all of them for the welfare and prosperity of American railroads as will best promote their successful and economical administration for the benefit alike of thier employes and investors.

RACE TRACK FOR FLORIDA

NEW YORK, September 16.—Not content with establishing a new race track in Michigan, "Big Tim" Sullivan is financing a new racing venture, which will be located at Jacksonville, Fla. He has obtained funds from his many friends to buy and lease enough ground in the famous Winter resort on which to construct a model race track.

Ground has been broken on the new course, and the timber for new stables and grand stand will soon be shipped from the West. It is proposed to have the new track ready to open on the first day of the new year. The meetings will be held in January, February and March.

WOMEN BEG FOR BREAD

LONDON, Sept. 14.—It is reported from Sunderland that want and privation among the inhabitants is very great. No less than three persons went insane in a week, driven crazy by hunger and worry. Lack of employment in the town is being considered by the Sunderland guardians and steps are being taken to relieve the situation. London and other large cities have been asked for help. It is no uncommon sight to see women on their knees at the town hall pleading for bread to keep their children from starvation.

Women, Respect Your Pneumogastric Nerve

Respect Your Overworked Heart, Your Poor Liver, Your Circulation and the Humanity That You Represent

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

We earnestly and emphatically beseech, implore and COMMAND every sensible woman to take off and burn up—immediately—that foolish high collar that goes up under her ears and makes her look like a lamb with its head caught in the fence, trying to reach out for distant grass.

Women, those collars are the culmination of all your foolishness. They are ugly, to begin with. Nature has spent a million years changing the thick, ugly, scaly neck of the salamander into the graceful lines with which you were born—and you spend your time and your money destroying those very lines.

Don't you respect the marvellous work that Nature has done for you? Why do you allow every foolish, half-crazy, speculative dressmaker to invent something to twist you out of shape and to spoil your natural beauty? Don't you think that the lines in your neck and of your chin are far more beautiful than a couple of pieces of steel or whalebone, running up under your ears on either side, covered with lace or some other trashy stuff?

Don't you know anything about your pneumogastric nerve? Then learn something.

There is just one nerve, madam, that runs from your stomach to your front brain. It is the ONLY nerve that goes into the front brain. It is the direct communication between your stomach, the factory that produces your tissues, and that front brain, in which important thought is carried on.

And that being the only nerve from the stomach to the brain, you ought to respect it. Nature respects it, takes the greatest care of it.

That nerve runs up under a great blood vessel in the neck. It is so precious in Nature's eyes that it is even put back of that blood vessel, using as a protection and cushion the blood vessel itself. When you press on the side of the neck you press on the intensely sensitive pneumogastric nerve. This is very bad for the brain, bad for the heart action and bad for the stomach.

Constant pressure of that kind, even slight pressure, suffices to reduce your vitality and your general health from thirty to fifty per cent.

One man we knew of who had been wearing foolish high collars, pressing on that nerve, gave up the high collars, gained thirty pounds and gained health at the same time.

Many women do not want to gain thirty pounds—more foolish they. And many women wear high collars and the foolish pieces of whalebone to conceal that double chin of which they are ashamed.

We wish to tell them, first, that a double chin is not a thing to be ashamed of: it is usually a sign of good health.

Second, you can't get rid of a double chin by squeezing it and by hurting your health. Everything that you do to interfere with heart action, to interfere with the normal action of the stomach, interferes with the process BY WHICH SURPLUS TISSUE IS ELIMINATED.

If you want to get normally thin, be natural. Don't have your neck squeezed, or your waist squeezed, or your ankles squeezed, or your wrists squeezed.

Give the blood a chance to flow EVERYWHERE. Give your liver a chance to work, don't keep it squeezed in.

The work done by your liver is far more important than the work done by any other part of the body, except the heart, so far as health goes.

Suppose some one should come and squeeze your nose down flat the way you squeeze your liver. Wouldn't you say, "I can't breathe, let me go!"

Well, every day of your life your liver says, "I can't work, let me work."

And every minute while you wear that idiotic high collar your pneumogastric nerve and your stomach and your brain and your heart are suffering and telling you that they cannot work.

Wear your collars low down in the Summer time. Have a plain black or white shirt waist, cut low in the neck, leaving your neck absolutely free. Put a little piece of lace inside the low-cut collar if you want to be fancy.

In Winter have your collars high, but have them very loose and soft—no linen, no starch.

Remember that your important business is not to look like a Paris poster or a fashion freak, but TO BE A HEALTHY, NORMAL WOMAN, CAPABLE OF GIVING TO THIS WORLD HEALTHY, NORMAL CHILDREN.

Take off the high collar with the whalebone stickers.

Take off the tight shoes that bind you around the ankles and stop circulation at the extremities.

Take off the tight corsets, TAKE OFF EVERYTHING TIGHT.

Have some brains, and give your brain a chance. Your brain depends on your heart, and your heart on your common sense.

The Vanished Rioters

By James J. Montague

THE kitten in contentment tucks its little clammy nose
Between its paws, and dozes off in safe, serene repose;
A queer, uncanny order reigns throughout each empty room.
Bespeaking scrubbing brush and soap, and newly wielded broom;
And unaccustomed quiet broods in living room and hall,
For all the little Rioters are off to school—that's all.

SWEET peace may find its way within to visit now and then.
And no wild, warring Indian chiefs shall drive her out again;
No roll of furious cannonades proclaim that battles rage
Along the stairs, where serried hosts in gory fight engage;
And trampling feet no longer tread the attic lanes all day,
For all the brutal soldiery has vanished quite away.

THE chairs remain where they are placed, the couch and table stand
Where they were stationed lately by an order-loving hand;
The pictures hang all prim and straight, and, stately stern and grave,
The androns guard the hearth that once led toward the Robbers' cave;
Around the quiet dining room no Murderous Acts are run,
For now another, harder race must entered be, and won:

A RACE with old Geography, and Grammar, giant grim;
And 'Rithmetic, who dares all foes to come and vanquish him;
While Reading piles up stumbling blocks where little feet must go;
And Writing, snake-like, winds his coils along the path below.
God grant they triumph in the race, like valiant girls and boys,
And come back home to make it Home with rioting and noise!

SPIRITS THAT FAIL

Manifestations of the Unseen Which Purport to Deal with the Material Are Not to Be Trusted

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

IN the scientific investigations which are filling the highest mission possible educated men are making to-day toward humanity.

along psychic lines there is hope for a larger understanding, in time, of the important subject of the Life Beyond.

But, meantime, there is much danger for the weak, the nervous and the incautious who pursue this research.

A man of high position, brilliant intellect and good intentions has just been sentenced to prison for embezzlement.

It has been his custom for years to consult clairvoyants and mediums regarding his business matters.

They assured him that certain projects would bring large returns, and into these projects he put money belonging to others which he should have guarded and protected.

True Spirits and False

HIS projects failed and the loss of the securities was revealed, and no disembodied spirit came to his rescue at the crucial hour.

It ought to be known by any mind of average reasoning power that a disembodied spirit is not on a high plane when it offers advice in purely material matters.

The office of a spiritual adviser in or out of the body is that of one who strengthens us for the higher things of life. One who gives us courage to toil, to bear with life's trials, to rise above the ailments of the body and dominate them, to control our unworthy impulses and appetites and passions; to be unselfish in the midst of selfishness, industrious in the midst of idleness, hopeful in the midst of despondent surroundings, and to keep our faith in the darkest hour of doubt.

Beware of the Material

THE clergyman, the priest, the yogi, the swami, and the invisible friends out of the body, who help us in this way, tell us how to control the market, what stock to buy or sell and how to make material gain, be sure he is not a capable or trustworthy spiritual adviser.

Beware of him or "it."

Earth-bound spirits there are without question, who loved nothing but money on earth, and who hang about earth's borders still dreaming of material things.

Those are the spirits who speak to the clairvoyant and the medium, and if they sometimes predict a thing which comes true, it is a happy accident and not because they have gained large wisdom. To listen to them and to commune with them is to keep them still closer to earth. And it is to be harmed and misled ourselves.

Let them alone; leave them to go about their Father's business and go your way about your own business.

Learn to concentrate. Learn to do well whatever you do. Learn to do one task before you begin another. Learn to control your own mind and to use all your hidden forces and to draw from space whatever you need for your best development.

Let them alone; leave them to go about their Father's business and go your way about your own business.

Learn to concentrate. Learn to do well whatever you do. Learn to do one task before you begin another. Learn to control your own mind and to use all your hidden forces and to draw from space whatever you need for your best development.

No Clairvoyant Needed

WHEN you have done all this, then you will receive radiant energy and illumination from the invisible helpers and they will not need a medium or a clairvoyant as a "middleman" to convey their message, but will give it to you direct. And they will not talk to you of stocks or bonds or real estate.

Keep away from the influences that do. They are not spiritual in the true sense, and they are dangerous and misleading.

You are sent to earth to use your own faculties, not the faculties of another, human or astral. Develop your own spirit.

Keep the Pot A-Boiling

By Wex Jones

SHIKAKEE, Sept. 15.—Mad elitheras wrecked the Opera House here last night during what was announced as a Bryan Speech evening.

When the people discovered that the speeches were "canned," and that the cans they had brought with them would not affect a phonograph, they demanded their money back.

The manager declared that as a consistent Democrat he couldn't establish any such precedent.

The damage to the Opera House, which was totally demolished, is estimated at $11.70.

MOZAMBIQUE, Sept. 15.—Jujube, the famous trick elephant, is being marched up-country to the hunting grounds. Jujube will fall down at the sound of a shot, and play dead long enough for even an amateur photographer to get a good picture of the hunter and his quarry.

Jujube has made more big game reputations than any other animal in Africa, and it is rumored that the giant tusker will be employed on a task of international importance in the near future.

OUTSIDE END BARS, Sept. 15.—Big Bill Taft forgot all about politics to-day and went on a good, old-fashioned fishing trip, accompanied by a few close personal friends.

Six launches accompanied the little party full of newspaper men, press agents, photographers, moving picture men and phonograph men, who had been invited to see the candidate having some genuine fun away from the madding—but nauseating, to a candidate—crowd.

Big Bill fished for ten minutes without much luck, when a private secretary hooked a huge bass to the candidate's line, and the monster was landed amid the clicking of cameras, whirr of machines and tapping of telegraph instruments.

Mr. Taft expressed himself as delighted with his day's outing, and said that as thought the tariff should be revised, sooner or later—if not sooner, then, of course, later.
